TORIES POWER GAINS IN HUGE BRITISH VOTE

MacDonald Triumphant as Party is Swept Into Office.

GREATEST MAJORITY IN HISTORY RECORDED

Loss of 236 Seats by Labor Candidates Nearly Wipes Out Group.

London, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Returns from 608 constituencies of the 615 in the House of Commons showed tonight the following party line-up:

Conservatives, 472; National Labor, 13; National Liberal, 55; Labor party, 50; Lloyd George Liberals, 5; Independents, 3.

Of these the National Government counts 555 and the opposition 50, with the Independents in doubt. Although the standing of the various factions of the Liberals has not been wholly made clear, it is believed none will join the opposition short of a vote on a full-blooded protection program.

Party Is Elected.

Swept into power with a mammoth majority of more than 500 seats of the 615 seats in the House of Commons, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's national government will be able to dominate Parliament as no other administration in the history of democratic Britain.

Tonight, with 608 returns available from yesterday's voting, there were 555 government supporters, only 50 in the opposition and 3 Independents.

The loss of 235 seats nearly wiped out the Labor representation in the House of Commons. Nothing like it ever occurred before in Great Britain.

The Conservative party held 472 seats with prospects of gaining a few more in the late returns. This great Conservative strength led to the expectation that a demand for a full-blooded protection tariff policy would be the first trouble encountered by Mr. MacDonald.

Tariff Is Pledged.

But, although an emergency tariff within a couple of weeks, the prime minister is pledged not to impose a general protective tariff until it has been fully investigated.

Great significance was seen in a statement by Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, who declared yesterday's results showed a national and not a party victory.

Although Mr. Baldwin did not go into the part the Conservatives will play in the House of Commons scheduled to hold its first session November 3, his statement was taken to indicate he would make no attempt to seize power for his party.

"The election is an emphatic declaration by the people as a whole in favor of national cooperation in order to restore the fortunes of our country," Mr. Baldwin said.

"The effect on foreign opinion cannot be overestimated. The overwhelming support given to the National government will resound through the world and reestablish confidence in the stability and greatness of our country. Democracy has justified itself in a most striking fashion."

Mr. MacDonald and Chancellor of the Exchequer Philip Snowden, who followed the prime minister from the Labor cabinet into the National government, also viewed the voting as vindication for the National ministry, and not a party victory.

This was shown most clearly, Mr. MacDonald said, by the fact that both J. H. Thomas, National Labor, and Sir Herbert Samuel, Liberal, both of whom are members of the National government, were returned by their constituencies.

"We appealed for a demonstration of national unity," the prime minister said. "The response has been far beyond the dreams of the most enthusiastic among us."

It was an unprecedented political changeover that the voters effected

Capital Hotel Sues On $6,250 Vallee Fee

New York, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—The Shoreham Hotel, Washington, D. C., today sued Connolly & Swanstrom, Inc., theatrical producers, for $6,250 as the fee it had to pay Rudy Vallee for one night to supplant Harry Richman, who, the suit declared, was ready to appear for $1,500 at the hotel's opening, in October, 1930.

The suit declares the producers required Richman to appear in St. Louis in a musical show, forcing him to break the contract with the hotel. It was necessary to get another well-known Broadway entertainer to take Richman's place, and Vallee was sent at greater expense, it was charged.

O'Donoghue May Get District Bench Place

Veteran Attorney Heads President's List for Supreme Court.

A vacancy on the District Supreme Court bench caused by the death of Frederick L. Siddons last July may be filled by Daniel W. O'Donoghue, former president of the District Bar Association and a practicing attorney in Washington for 30 years. Mr. O'Donoghue is known to be under serious consideration of President Hoover for the post.

The President will make a selection to fill the vacancy either today or tomorrow, from present indications. The Attorney General has made a careful investigation into the qualifications of Mr. O'Donoghue and it is understood that his name stands at the head of the list, although several other Washington attorneys have been considered for the position.

Among these are George P. Hoover, Paul E. Lesh, George P. Barse, Paul Sleman and Leo A. Rover, United States attorney for the District.

The appointment to be made at present will be a recess one and when Congress reconvenes in December the appointment must be remade and referred to Congress for confirmation. The appointment will be made at present because business of the court has been piling up and it is desired

16 CHARGES LISTED BY CANNON ON LIBEL

Answers Glass and Warns Two Lynchburg Papers He Would Sue.

(Associated Press.)

Bishop James Cannon, jr., last night issued a list of sixteen charges involving himself, the publication of which by the Lynchburg (Va.) News or the Lynchburg Advance would cause him to sue for libel.

"Enlightening the ignorance of Senator Glass," was the heading of the Southern Methodist cleric's statement. At the start he quoted this recent assertion by the Virginia legislator:

"If it were conceivably possible, in the face of recent disclosures, for anybody to libel Bishop Cannon, I would not know how to go about it."

With that, the churchman proceeded:

"It is really so amazing for Senator Glass to confess his inability to do anything whatever, that I have decided to tell him how he can put his innuendoes into plainly libelous form.

"The Lynchburg News and the Lynchburg Advance are both newspapers which are known to be controlled by Senator Glass, and they are properties of considerable value, as witness the goodly sum paid by the Government for condemnation of the News-Advance building in Lynchburg, and damages in a successful suit for libel against these papers could probably be collected.

"The simplest way to insure a suit for libel by Bishop Cannon is for the Lynchburg News and the Lynchburg Advance to print in their editorial columns the following charges, thus assuming full responsibility for publication of the same:

"First, in 1909, when Mr. Glass desired the nomination for governor of Virginia, Dr. James Cannon, jr., representing the Antisaloon League of Virginia, made an 'unholy alliance' with the brewers, distillers, and the so-called Martin-Flood-Swanson faction of the Democratic party to secure the nomination of Senator William Hodges Mann as governor.

"Second: Dr. James Cannon, jr., was guilty of violating the law against hoarding flour during the World War.

"Third: In the Richmond Auditorium in the campaign of 1928, Senator Glass told the truth when he declared that, while he was giving his humble services to the cause of prohibition without compensation, Dr. James Cannon, jr., was the paid agent of the Antisaloon League of Virginia.

"Fourth: Kalle & Co., of New York, operated a bucketshop, and Bishop

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover yesterday felicitated President Thomas G. Masaryk of Czechoslovakia on the thirteenth anniversary of the establishment of that republic.

U. S. AND NEW YORK STUDY POWER ISSUE

Negotiations Begin to Settle St. Lawrence River Rights Now in Dispute.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

Negotiations between the Federal Government and the State of New York for the disposition of the water power arising out of the construction of the hydroelectric project on the St. Lawrence River were started here yesterday. The negotiations are believed to have significant political, as well as economic implications, since Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, has persistently upheld the rights of the State to all power created out of the project.

The interests of the Federal Government are deeply involved, since the rights of another nation, Canada, to collateral sovereignty in the construction of the project are of equal importance with American rights.

At the present time direct negotiations are being carried on between the State Department and the Canadian Minister here, Maj. W. B. Herridge, for the conclusion of a treaty between the two countries, in which the sovereign rights of the United States and Canada in the construction will be protected.

A somewhat similar situation to that which confronts the Federal Government and the State government has already been considerably adjusted by the Dominion government and the government of the Province of Ontario. Under the terms of this Canadian understanding, the Canadian Minister is enabled to go perhaps further in his commitments than the Secretary of State, who has yet to determine the extent of Federal and State rights in the matter.

Gov. Roosevelt has the enthusiastic support of the New York upstate Republican element in his efforts to expedite the construction of the project. Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the Power Authority of the State of New York, and Delos M. Cosgrove, vice chairman, called at the State Department yesterday and presented the Secretary of State with a copy of their memorandum, which recites the constitutional and precedent authorities for the claims of the State of New York, that "it is the sole and absolute owner of that part of the water flowing in the St. Lawrence River, and to the land comprising its bed and the power and power sites in, upon or adjacent to it on the American side of the international boundary, and is fully vested with a legal and inalienable title thereto."

However, the terms of the Federal power act, upon which the decision of the State Department will be very largely based, does not completely jibe with this State's rights viewpoint. Secretary Stimson, who is himself a New Yorker, and is very naturally aware of the interests of his native State in the discussion, will very propably hold further negotiations with the representatives of the New York

Supreme Court to Adjourn Today for Lack of Business

(Associated Press.)

The Supreme Court today will have the unusual experience of being forced to adjourn temporarily for want of business.

Criticism of courts because of delay does not apply to the highest of all. It is up with its work—and as events yesterday demonstrated, a little ahead.

The court had planned to continue oral argument of cases through this week and then take a recess until November 23 to prepare opinions.

After argument began yesterday in two cases, however, the court learned that when it is finished today there are no more suits ready for oral presentation. Adjournment for the rest of the week will follow.

No so long ago litigants before the Supreme Court were required to wait approximately two years to be heard. Now the court disposes of controversies as fast as counsel can present them.

JAPAN PUSHES TROOPS NORTH TO OPEN LINE

ARMY NOW OCCUPIES POSITION LIKE 1925

Foreign Office Prepares to Give League List of Violations.

Tokyo, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Japan moved today to protect her interests in northern Manchuria, requesting Russia to stop troop concentrations on the Manchurian border, and sending engineers north along the Supingkai-Taonan-Anganchi Railway to cross the Chinese Eastern line and reopen the direct route from Taonan to Tsitsihar.

Troops accompanied the engineers. This is farther north in Manchuria than any Japanese troops have gone since Russo-Japanese relations were resumed in 1925.

The foreign office announced also it would submit to the League of Nations council a list of Sino-Japanese treaties it feels China has failed to respect. China is on record at Geneva as acknowledging her obligation under the league convenant to respect treaty stipulations.

Sixth Week of Row.

Thus the sixth week of the difficulty brought no sign of direct Sino-Japanese negotiations for which the league council hoped, and no indication of withdrawal of Japanese forces in Manchuria to the areas to which their activities are limited by treaty.

The trouble started September 18 with a clash near Mukden over a railway bridge Japanese guards claimed Chinese soldiers damaged. The Chinese have denied this.

It was another bridge which led today to the dispatch of the Japanese engineers to Anganchi.

Taking advantage of the disorganization which followed Japanese occupation of Mukden and other Manchurian governmental centers, Gen. Chang Hai-Peng, Heilungkiang Province rebel, sought to seize Tsitsihar, provincial capital, and set up a separate government.

Forces loyal to the Nationalist governor, Wan Fu-Lin, routed Chang's troops, but meanwhile wrecked three railroad bridges along the Nonni River to hinder the rebels' movements. This stopped traffic on the line north from Taoman, which the Japanese now propose to restore.

The line, while Chinese operated, was built with money borrowed from the South Manchurian Railway, Japanese semigovernmental concern.

Reds May Protest.

There was some speculation whether the Moscow government would reply to the "troop concentration" note with a protest against the work of these engineers, since the Russians protested against the original extension of the line to Tsitsihar as it robbed the Chinese Eastern Railway, which is owned jointly by Russia and China, of much Tsitsihar traffic.

Foreign Minister Shidehara's note today took cognizance of persistent reports from Chinese sources that from 20,000 to 30,000 Russian troops had been concentrated recently near Pogranichnaya on the eastern Manchurian border, and Manchouli, on the western border. Shidehara expressed concern and asked Russia to cease further military operations "which might be misinterpreted."

No further plans have been made for the operation, which was decided upon late yesterday after a four-day examination.

HOOVER HELD IGNORANT ON NAVAL AFFAIRS

League Says President Knows Not Why They Are Maintained.

PRINTED PAMPHLET CONTAINS CHARGE

Plan to Immunize Seaborne Food in Time of War Is Basis of Attack.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover was charged by the Navy League yesterday with exhibiting an "abysmal ignorance of why navies are maintained and of how they are used to accomplish their major mission."

A printed pamphlet, issued in behalf of the league over the signature of William Howard Gardiner, president of the civilian organization which represents much of the Navy sentiment for more powerful armament, carried this statement with an expression of regret. Then, it concluded:

"It has been necessary, however, to say what has been said above, if we are to have a real appreciation of the impelling motives back of President Hoover's efforts, at every turn, to restrict, to reduce and to starve the United States Navy—under the present plea of budget limitation on which we may have further cause to comment."

The "abysmal ignorance" attributed to Mr. Hoover was said to have been shown in his proposal to immunize seaborne food supplies during time of war.

Bigger and Bloodier Wars.

"Acceptance of his suggestion would have worked not only diametrically counter to the interests and weight of the United States in world affairs but, in effect, would have made for bigger and bloodier wars," Gardiner added. "And yet such is the psychology that is not only controlling our internal naval policy but dictating its external subordination to those of foreign naval powers."

Gardiner's pamphlet reviewed the entire naval policy of Mr. Hoover from the time he held up cruiser construction in preparation for the London naval conference down to the present. The league charged that the President's conversations with Premier Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain at the Rapidan in 1929 "reached agreements that have never officially been divulged in their entirety."

"This suggests why the administration refused to allow even an executive session of the Senate committee on foreign relations to see the full record of its negotiations and possible commitments preparatory to the London naval conference of 1930," it continued.

Independent Policies.

In the publication the Navy League described itself as "an organization of civilians that for over a quarter of a century has specialized on accurate information as to naval matters." It added that the league's "policies are formulated independently by its officers and directors, who are all civil-

French Men-o'-War Off For Home With Petain

The destroyers, Duquesne and Suffren, left their moorings to the accompaniment of cheers from citizens and sailors on shore. The delegation had come from Yorktown, Va., to commemorate the 151st anniversary of the landing of Rochambeau and his French soldiers.

Moses Grants House Control to Democrats

G. O. P. Leader in Senate Says Opposition Will Name Speaker.

Concord, N. H., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Senator George H. Moses, in an address before the Churchmen's Club tonight, predicted the next House of Representatives would be organized by the Democrats, with a Democratic Speaker.

He said administration economy would not of necessity involve closing the Navy yards at Boston and Portsmouth.

"The President's naval program," he said, "will be debated and it is well to remember that the President does not propose to halt naval construction. In fact, it has been emphasized that the naval economies will not infringe upon the building program calling for construction to the amount of $65,000,000 in the next year."

Peeking into the future, Senator Moses asserted that "anticipation of the Seventy-second Congress is not altogether pleasurable." He predicted Congress would have to turn its attention to the budget and to emergency deficiency appropriations.

"There will be insistent requests, not to say demands, for direct grants of Federal money and further anticipation will be urged of Federal building programs—already anticipated for several years," he said.

"Probably," he added, "a congressional commission will be appointed to study international debts and determine the capacity of nations of Europe to pay. Domestic problems of tremendous importance hardly can fail to be complicated by international considerations."

Control of the closely divided House yesterday continued to ride the whirling wheel of fortune.

Republican forces apparently suffered the loss of a needed seat in New Hampshire until after Congress convenes December 7, but planned to select a speakership nominee at a conference here November 30.

Word came from New Hampshire that the normally Republican first District would be unable to send a successor to the late Representative Fletcher Hale until near the end of

MORGAN'S PARTNER FIGHTS HIGH TARIFF

T. W. Lamont Says aCuts Would Help Recovrey of World Trade.

New ork, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Thomas W. Lamont, a partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., went on record today as opposed to "excessive protectionism" and urged judicious lowerign of the American tariff as a means towar1 solution of world economic problems.

"A country can not become overwhelmingly the creditor of the rest of the world and at the same time remain a high tariff nation," he said.

Lamont's views are expressed in an article in the Saturday Review of Literature, discussing a book by Dr. Hjalmar G. Schacht, former head of the Reichsbank, on "the end of reparations."

"Can there be any question," Lamont wrote, "that what Dr. Schacht characterizes as excesisve protectionism is one of the causes that not only helps ot cripple Germany, but makes the whole world go limping along?

"In almost every country, including our own, this excessive protectionism is hard to work. Every country declares it is a very bad thing for the other country, but a good and necessary thing for itself.

"And we blithely go forward here in America to set up new and higher barriers for trade to try to leap over or fall prostrate before. Even now the question of placing a tariff on copper and oil is being seriously discussed here.

"And yet those are probably the two products, counting in the South American copper-producing companies that are American owned and controlled, that we produce more cheaply than any other country in the world."

Lamont termed as "contradictory" America's maintenance of a high tariff wall and its credit extension policies.

"American bankers and investors have about come to the point," he said, "although not all of them may realize it yet, where they will no longer feel safe in making loans abroad, while their government continues to stick rigidly to a tariff policy that threatens to take away

LETTER SPURS HUNT FOR AID TO POWERS

Postal Authorities Intercept Note Sent to Prisoner in Clarksburg Killings.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—The Charles Rogers, who Harry F. Powers claims was the actual slayer of five persons, whose bodies were found buried in a shallow trench near Powers' garage at Quiet Dell, near here, again became a prominent figure in the case today.

It was reported reliably that a letter signed "Charles Rogers" and addressed to Powers, was received here today. It bore the postmark of a Massachusetts city.

Postal officials turned over the missive to Sheriff W. B. Grimm, who left the city shortly afterward without comment. Sheriff Grimm has been the custodian of Powers' mail since the alleged mass killer was removed from the county jail to the State penitentiary at Moundsville for safekeeping.

After his arrest Powers, who confessed to four of the five killings, said he aided in bringing the victims to Clarksburg, but that Rogers did the actual killing.

For several weeks police searched extensively for Rogers, but after several suspects had been arrested and released the hunt was abandoned.

Powers is to go on trial next month for the slayings.

Boy, 12, Guilty in Slaying; Jury Favors Life Sentence

Youth Who Kille[d] Sheriff During Robbery Shows No Emotion on Hearing Verdict; Had Laughed and Joked During Trial, But Cried Once.

Asotin, Wash., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Hubert Nicolls, 12, was convicted today of murder in the first degree for the slaying of Sheriff Shon Wormell, and the jury recommended life imprisonment.

The boy sat stolidly as he heard the verdict, showing no emotion. A murmur rippled over the crowded courtroom. But Hubert still did not even blink.

Sheriff Wormell was slain when he found the boy looting a grocery.

The verdict meant that the jury discarded the insanity, abnormality and mental irresponsibilities pleas of defense counsel, and that Hubert will spend the rest of his life in Washington State Penitentiary, unless released earlier for good behavior or pardoned.

The defense had admitted the main facts of the case, that Hubert had stolen a revolver, entered Peter Klaus' store to steal tobacco and gum, and shot the 72-year-old sheriff, who searched the place after receiving a burglary "tip."

During the 3 hours and 3 minutes the jury was deliberating, young Niccolls, known as the "barefoot boy slayer," frolicked about the courtroom, laughing and joking and playing with spectators and court officials.

During arguments this morning he soundly in court for awhile, then appeared very bored. When the case went to the jury he cried for the first time since the trial began. The call to luncheon cheered him up, however, and the prospect of two kinds of pie made him beam broadly.

The case went to the jury at 1:35 p. m., after attorneys pleaded for the boy's life, while Hubert, wearied of all the talk, went to sleep.

The prosecutor did not ask the death penalty, but urged that the boy

GIFFORD URGES 10-POINT PLAN TO ASSIST IDLE

Industry Managers Asked to Divide Available Employment.

"MAKE-WORK" DRIVES ARE RECOMMENDED

More Liberal Banker Policy Toward Borrowers Also Called Necessary.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

A ten-point program for concerted national action to promote immediate employment and accelerate business recovery on all fronts was outlined yesterday in a special report of President Hoover's Emergency Organization on Unemployment Relief.

The report signalizes completion of the third major phase of the task assigned to Walter S. Gifford last August, when the President pledged "the whole force of the administration" to the work of preventing suffering and distress during the approaching winter. Previous reports of the emergency commission dealt with the mobilization of community relief funds, and with the coordination of regional plans for administering assistance.

Yesterday's report was devoted to the larger problem of putting men and women back on the pay roll, and thus steaming up the whole economic machine. Mr. Gifford urged that ten recommendations be "promptly translated into action."

"Make Work" Projects.

Specifically, the report recommended that industrial managers take vigorous steps to insure the equal division of available employment among their normal forces; that every community organize itself to promote emergency "make work" projects; that public works programs be hastened by the slashing of administrative red tape and, finally, that rural and urban communities organize to facilitate the transfer of unemployed city workers to winter tasks on nearby farms.

In the field of finance, the subcommittee urged expansion of the emergency credit pool plan worked out by the National Credit Corporation, and a more "liberal and encouraging attitude" on the part of bankers generally toward their established patrons. Finally, the entire Nation is urged, in a word, to throw off its fears and misgivings and resume normal purchases.

Recovery Factors Present.

"As the most nearly self-contained Nation, we have within our own boundaries the element factors of recovery," said the introductory statement of Harry A. Wheeler, Chicago banker, and chairman of the subcommittee on employment plans. "Our national wealth, even stripped of the inflated value foolishly placed on it, still is greater than our prewar wealth. It is greater, too, than it would have been under any normal increase between 1914-1931. The overwhelming volume of our domestic business in comparison with export trade places us in a position to develop internally a constructive recovery if we will but grasp the opportunity which still is ours."

One of the most emphatic recommendations of the subcommittee pointed to the necessity for dividing civil service assignments with the unemployed.

"As distinguished from private employment, there is a vast group in Federal, State and local public service, under civil service appointment, which in general has not felt the pinch of unemployment, nor been called upon to share their hours of work," the report said. "If a truly national effort is to be attained this group, representing one of the largest single blocs of labor, must be called upon to make their contribution. This committee urges upon the elected and appointed officers of the Federal, State and municipal governments, and the heads of all Departments, to at once

LABOR WILL RETURN, HENDERSON BELIEVES

Says He Will Begin Today to Organize Opposition for Parliament.

Burnley, Lancashire, England, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—"Uncle Arthur" Henderson, whose Labor party was swamped in the general election, declared today the "Labor movement will go on with its work, undeterred by this temporary setback."

"It will rise again stronger and more vigorous than ever," he said.

Mr. Henderson, who succeeded to party leadership after Ramsay MacDonald had been repudiated for establishing the national government, arose from his sickbed today and announced that tomorrow he would go to London to organize the opposition for the Parliament.

He caught a heavy cold on the eve of the voting that cost him his own seat from Burnley. It is expected he will be provided with a safe constituency in a by-election.

"A shattering blow has been dealt at labor in Parliament," he said. "This is not the first time the electors have been duped on a grand scale, but what is astonishing is to find that the old electioneering deception has been utilized by men who in the past have been victims with us of wild and vile calumnies.

"It would be idle to deny that labor has suffered a severe setback, but the labor movement is not broken, its spirit is not crushed.

"Neither is it discredited. Our total vote is clear proof of the strength of labor in the constituencies. No one will be able to claim that the new Parliament is a fair representation of the opinions of the country.

The House of Commons will be a mockery of democratic parliamentary representation and from the standpoint of general national interest this is a danger and a disaster.

"Labor as the only effective bulwark against reaction and revolution has not been destroyed."

Mr. Henderson, foreign secretary in the MacDonald Labor cabinet and internationally known laborer for world peace, was beaten in Burnley by Rear Admiral Gordon Campbell, who led him by more than 8,000 votes.

Two prominent representatives of Great Britain call at the White House. Sir Ronald Lindsay, left, British Ambassador, took H. G. Wells, British historian and novelist, there yesterday to present him to President Hoover.

Wells Visions Communism If Nationalist Party Fails

Author, Visiting in Capital, Sees Reconstructed Order of Economic and Financial Life and Hopes for Success Without Overthrow of Present Order.

By ROBERT ALBRIGHT.

A slightly bald, distinguished little man, who discoursed on "open conspiracy" for a rebirth of intellect for all the world like the college professor he so vigorously denounces, yesterday surveyed the world from a drawing room, and saw it trending toward communism.

The "open conspirator," H. G. Wells, author of "The Outline of History," and a bewildering array of fiction and nonfiction, flew down from New York with his publisher, Nelson Doubleday, Tuesday for a visit at the home of James F. Curtis.

He sees a need for complete readjustment of the economic systems of the world—for a "world control of economic and financial life." And he "hopes" it can be accomplished by "adaptation," without a revolutionary overthrow of prevailing systems.

But this mild appearing little Englishman, whose conservative demeanor belies his radical views, interpreted the news of the day as definitely pointing toward a reconstructed order with "the modern state subordinate to Federal world control."

The overwhelming victory of the Nationalist party in England he construed as follows:

"If the Nationalist party fails in restoring prosperity, the thing that will happen is the same thing that will happen over here—a trend toward Communism.

"If it fails in its purpose, it means that the Labor party will come back, not as a Labor party, but as a Communist or Socialist party."

The Nationalist coalition he viewed as "a new idea in politics and a very good idea," but he denied its success at the polls is a "conservative victory."

The center of a little group of newspapermen at the Curtis home at 1925 F street northwest, Mr. Wells, who described himself as "a sort of journalist," parried with facility a barrage of questions, as he discussed the gamut of things and personalities from Mahatma Gandhi, whom he does not admire, to Sinclair Lewis, whom he likes very much.

Following are a few of his views on "shoes and ships and sealing wax."

"I don't think I shall be remembered by posterity. The books I have written on history, science and sociology are not going to live. They will be replaced by new books of a more modern type.

"The colleges have always tended to lag. I am just a supplementary schoolmaster, filling in until the colleges catch up with the times.

"I do not know whether Mr. Hoover's moratorium of war debts has yet saved the world from economic ruin, but at least it has put the day off.

"The American Constitution left out one of the fundamental rights—the right to knowledge.

"Family life and personal relationships are undergoing revolution now. Women freed will find an outlet in industrialism. I don't believe there ever will be a matriarchy; I don't think one ever existed.

"There will always be monogamy, as long as there are about as many men in the world as there are women.

"Russia is not a communistic state but a state capitalism. That state capitalism is the most interesting of the three experiments that have been tried there. I think there are a lot of things in Russia that are tremendously right.

"We are living in a dangerous world, but not necessarily one calling for despair.

"Premier Laval believes with me that national economic barriers should be broken down, judging from his statement to the press yesterday, en route home. He has joined the open conspiracy."

Driverless Motorcycle Runs Miles and Finally Crashes

New York, Oct. 28 (U.P.).—Patrolman Frank Snyder took one look at it, gasped, rubbed his eyes and looked again. It was a motorcycle, racing down Vanderbilt avenue with nobody, not even a ghost, on it. Patrolman Snyder's eyes stood out like stops on an organ.

He ordered it to halt. It didn't. He got out his book of regulations, but could find no clause dealing with riderless motorcycles. So he called up headquarters for counsel.

Meantime the motorcycle went its merry way. At Bergen street a taxi driver ran his car over the curb. At Dean street a fat man solemnly pulled a bottle from his pocket and broke it over a fire plug. At Pacific street a woman screamed and a newsboy ran for cover.

Finally, on Atlantic avenue, the machine crashed through a store window, shot 15 feet along a counter and stopped. It was traced to its owner, Fred Sitter, who said he had left it standing in front of his home, miles away.

Watkins, clerk of the Montgomery County circuit court, has detailed his deputy clerks tonight to receive declarations of intention to become citizens of Maryland from new residents and those who were registered last election under the affidavit system at the following places: Bethesda County Building, Silver Spring County Building and Chevy Chase Library.

Mr. Watkins or one of his deputies will be present at these places from 5:30 o'clock until 10 o'clock tonight. New voters must have declared their intentions to become Maryland citizens before November 7. Declarations will be taken at the clerk's office in the courthouse at Rockville any time between 9 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. until November 7.

Winchester Arms Sale Seen in Reorganization

New York, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—A plan for reorganization and sale of the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., a Delaware corporation, now in receivership, was made public today in a statement to bond holders.

Western Cartridge Co., a Delaware Corporation, is mentioned as the intended purchaser, for the aggregate price of $3,000,000 in cash and $4,800,000, par amount, of 6 per cent preferred stock of Western and payment by the purchaser of $300,000 toward the expenses of receivership and reorganization.

14 WOMEN ELECTED, LED BY LADY ASTOR

13 Successful Candidates Conservatives; Some of Those Defeated.

London, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Fourteen women led by Nancy Lady Astor will grace the green leather-backed chairs of the House of Commons when the new house is convoked next month.

Thirteen have stanch conservative convictions. One, the incalculable Miss Megan Lloyd George, is a Liberal. Not one of the 36 women candidates of the Labor party was elected, although there were 10 women laborites in the last Parliament.

Only four of the fourteen victors have sat in the House of Commons before—Lady Astor, Lady Iveagh, the Duchess of Atholl and Miss Lloyd George.

Among those who will be missing when Parliament convenes will be pretty 26-year-old Jenny Lee, Scottish miner's daughter. Missing also will be Miss Margaret Bondfield—"our Maggie"—minister of labor in the late Labo government, who sometimes appeared for commons sessions in a flimsy picture hat, black dress and low heeled shoes and carrying a large black umbrella.

Another who won't be there is Miss Ellen Wilkinson, who has a novel running in serial form in one of London's newspapers. Susan Lawrence, Lean Manning and Mrs. Mary Hamilton are among the othes who have lost their places.

Among the newcomers are the Hon. Mary Pickford, daughter of the late Lord Sterndale; Miss rene Ward, Miss Thelma Cazalet, Miss F. M. Graves, Mrs. Ida Copeland, Miss Florance Horsbrugh, Mrs. N. C. Runce, Mrs. H. B. Tate, Mrs. Helen Shaw and Mrs. W. J. Ward.

Britain's Popular Vote 2 to 1 for Government

London, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—The popular vote in yesterday's general election was two to one for the National government. Unofficial figures, made public tonight, were:

Conservatives, 11,780,487.
National Labor, 344,282.
National Liberal, 1,891,106.
National Independent, 58,032.
Labor Party, 6,849,944.
Liberal, 233,104.
Others, 255,110.

Only the Labor party vote can be listed as unquestionably opposed to the National government.

Great Britain Election Sends Up Mast Stocks

London, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—The results of the general election were signalized today by a burst of enthusiasm mon the stock exchange and a general marking up of prices of gilt-edged offerings and industrials.

War loans were quoted at 99 in early dealings, which started half an hour before the official opening. Dealers and brokers arrived long before 10:30, the official opening time, and cheered heartily at the results already announced. They then proceeded to mark up "election majorities" to 450 in favor of the National government.

Body of Missing Druggist Found.

Fort Smith, Ark., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Missing since Saturday night, the nude body of Glen Little, 26, Van Buren druggist, was found in the Arkansas River today with a 25-pound stone tied about the neck. No marks of violence were found on the body.

RAMSAY MACDONALD'S PARTY WINS BY GIGANTIC MAJORITY

at the polls following upon a stirring three-week campaign in which the National government appealed for support to avert the threat against Britain's economic and financial position among the nations of the world.

Twenty-two members of the old Labor ministry lost their Commons seats. Chief among them was Arthur Henderson, Labor leader.

No member of the National cabinet was beaten. The only really important Labor leader returned to the House was George Lansbury, cockney patriarch.

No British prime minister faced more serious problems at home and abroad than those that confront Mr. MacDonald. None was ever so potentially empowered to deal with them as he.

The prime minister himself achieved a sensational personal triumph among the coal miners of the County of Durham comparable to the national government's triumph throughout the country.

Beating William Coxon, local schoolmaster, by more than 5,000 votes, Mr. MacDonald received his mandate from working class people of the coal mining area.

Mr. MacDonald's joy at his own victory was second only to his gratification at the triumph of his son Malcolm at Bassetlaw, running as a National Labor candidate. Mr. Henderson's son, Arthur, jr., went down with the rest of Labor. Mr. Baldwin's Socialist son Oliver, also was beaten. Winston Churchill remains in the new Parliament as does Sir Austen Chamberlain.

Nancy Lady Astor will mother a whole flock of new Conservative women members. Not one Labor woman saved her seat. They are all gone, from pretty Jennie Lee to the motherly and intellectual Susan Lawrence. In the new house there will be 14 women.

In connection with fears that the Conservatives, instead of being welded into the National government, might attempt to run away with it, it was recalled that they had an overwhelming majority when the Baldwin government was elected in 1924. But they dashed it to pieces in an effort to force tariff on the country.

Conservatives' Reminder.

The Conservatives have a reminder that their big representation in Commons is not built on too solid foundations in the popular vote cast yesterday. They polled 11,780,487, while Labor totaled 6,749,944. Thus, with only twice as many ballots as Labor, the Conservatives gained ten times as many seats in the house.

Although generally stunned by the results of the election, Labor leaders point to the almost 7,000,000 votes as the bedrock strength of the movement. Words of sympathy from Mr. MacDonald came as a bitter dose to many of them.

"This is not the end of the Labor party," the prime minister said in a message to the Seaham voters who gave him his victory. "It will rise again, but only with new leaders who have vision and courage.

"But it must be based on a citizens' and not a class outlook. This defeat of the Labor party will be for its ultimate good, if its lessons are learned."

He told his Seaham constituents that Britain's position in the world will be immeasurably strengthened by the election.

Rebuilding Cabinet.

The prime minister's first task will be the rebuilding of his cabinet. Conversations with this in view will start tomorrow with Mr. Baldwin and Sir Herbert Samuel. The present emergency cabinet of ten probably will be increased to twenty.

Mr. Snowden, who is expected to be elevated to the House of Lords, will not remain as chancellor of the exchequer because of the condition of his health and it is expected that Neville Chamberlain, Conservative, will succeed him.

The preponderence of Conservatives in the House of Commons is likely to result in numerous Conservative appointments. If pressure from tariff advocates becomes too strong the position of Sir Herbert Samuel and Sir Donald MacLean might become untenable.

Some difficulty may be encountered by Mr. MacDonald in steering his top-heavy parliamentary machine along the middle of the road. As one commentator said today:

"No prime minister faced such a task as Mr. MacDonald will have trying to persuade his team of political racehorses, cart horses and mules to remain in the middle of the road or even to continue hitched up to the same political caravan."

Urges Economy.

In a spectacular campaign the prime minister, waving millions in worthless German marks before the miners' wives, reduced the problems of national government to those of cottage housekeeping. He said Britain must make both ends meet, and he warned the workers their shillings would go the way the mark went during the German inflation period unless Britain made its money secure. Then, convincing them by poignant appeals that he remained heart and soul a Labor man, he got their votes.

This afternoon, with a bunch of white heather in his hand—the same sort of lucky token he has used since the emergency government was formed—he entered the big door of No. 10 Downing street, to begin another chapter of his remarkable political life.

The election shattered many political records as well as political careers. The Conservative membership of Commons is the largest ever held by any party. The government's majority tops all previous totals, the nearest to it being the 370 seats held by the Liberal government in 1832.

With more than 500 administration supporters, the geography of Commons will be altered. Instead of the government and its opponents facing each other from the long benches, the Labor opposition will have to occupy a little corner of scarcely more than two short benches.

The Liberals as a whole gained in strength, although splits over the national government render their position uncertain. There are 70 Liberals altogether.

(Associated Press.)

Astonishment and optimism combined last night in American officialdom's reaction to Great Britain's political upheaval.

The national government had been expected to receive firm support at the polls. The landslide which left the opposition with scarcely a handful of votes in the House of Commons brought expressions of amazement here.

The overwhelming support led to optimistic statements that the government was now in a position to deal positively with Britain's economic difficulties.

From early in the day, the question most often asked concerned the fate of Ramsay MacDonald. Because of his visit to President Hoover two years ago, the prime minister is probably better known in America than any other British statesman. Word of his election was communicated immediately to Secretary Stimson, personal friend of the prime minister and his closest coworker in making successful the London Naval Conference last year.

Hoover Watches Returns.

President Hoover also closely followed the returns at his desk at the White House. While there was no formal comment at the White House or the State Department, the overwhelming support given the national government was received with the utmost gratification, tempered only by speculation over the ultimate position of Mr. MacDonald.

Intimations have reached Washington that a majority such as the Conservatives received in the House of Commons might lead them to organize a strictly conservative government. Some State Department officials, assigned to follow British affairs, expressed the opinion, however, that the victory was an omen of popular support for the national government.

H. G. Wells, the historian, and one of Britain's keenest political observers, here for a visit, described the election as a simple mandate to "call in the doctors," rather than a triumph for conservatism.

Sidelights on Election Reveal Battle Scars

(Associated Press.)

Prime Minister MacDonald, returning from Seaham Harbor by airplane, stood in front of No. 10 Downing street without a tie and in baggy trousers to tell a cheering throng that "I am glad to get back to work."

Kid Lewis, former middleweight champion of England, took a knockout on his first appearance in the political ring. He polled only 152 votes out of a total of nearly 24,000 as a new party candidate in Whitechapel, London.

Capt. Ian Frazer, blind war veteran, and chairman of St. Dunsan's School for the Lightless, regained his seat from the London borough of St. Pancras. He ran as a Conservative and defeated his old Labor opponent, J. Marley. He will be the only blind member of Parliament.

BUREAU AID TO AUTO INDUSTRY EXPLAINED

Message From Burgess Is Read at Convention Which Will Close Tonight.

Various ways by which the United States Bureau of Standards is aiding the automobile industry in effecting economies of production and operation were explained in a message from Dr. G. K. Burgess, director of the bureau, read at last night's session of the Society of Automotive Engineers at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mr. Burgess, having been stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage during a meeting at the bureau yesterday morning, was unable to be present to deliver his message to the automotive engineers in person, but his address was read by C. S. Bruce, of the Bureau of Standards, who served as chairman of the meeting.

In his message Mr. Burgess emphasized the need now, more than ever before, for elimination of waste, and declared that there is a tremendous opportunity within the automobile industry now for the elimination of much waste. He told also of vast savings to the public at large effected by the bureau through its research activities in connection with fuel, oils and tires.

Will Close Tonight.

The convention will close tonight with a banquet at the Shoreham at which W. R. Smith, president of the American Road Builders' Association, and Roe Fulkerson, of Washington, will be speakers. Mr. Smith's topic will be the "Present Trend in Highway Construction."

The day's program will open with a technical session this morning at which W. C. Nagel, of the Bender Body Co., will discuss the relation of the motorcoach body to the chassis, from the standpoint of factors of chassis construction affecting body design and their coordination in complete vehicle design.

At the same session G. H. Scragg, of Mack Trucks, Inc., will discuss the same topic from the angle of the relation of comfort and appearance to speed, reliability and safety. He will discuss body and chassis weakness and their remedies, bus characteristics now treated as a unit, with bodies as the basic consideration, and the trend toward compactness of components and engine accessibility.

Visit White House.

Yesterday afternoon the engineers visited the White House where they were received by President Hoover. At a technical session in the morning, A. J. Poole, of Bendix Aviation Corporation, discussed the commercial application of Diesel engines in motor vehicles, reviewing comparative dynamometer and load tests of heavy-duty Diesel and gasoline engines; economic possibilities of the Diesel engine applied to heavy-duty vehicle operation; practical advantages of this type of motor, and commented on Diesel fuel problems.

A talk on chassis lubrication, various lubricants and methods of using them on chassis, engine, axle and transmission, was delivered by A. J. Scaife, of White Motor Co., who stressed the need for uniform lubrication methods and fewer lubricants.

BRITISH TARIFF ACT FEARE DIN GERMANY

London Papers Exult at "Annihilation of Socialist Party."

Berlin, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—German press comment on the conservative victory in the British elections centered today on the fear that Great Britain would soon erect barriers against Germany's export trade and would make solution of the reparations problem more difficult than ever.

Germany's trade balance with Great Britain in 1930 amounted to about $150,000,000 in her favor. Hopes were voiced that a most-favored nation agreement would mitigate the worst hardships of a possible British protective tariff.

Rightist elements were elated over the Conservative landslide and the newspaper Reichsbote described it as "an admirable example for all German patriots and Christians to follow at the next elections." The social democrat organs correspondingly were dejected at what they termed the advent of a dictatorship of Conservatives in England.

Danes Exhibit Alarm.

Copenhagen, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Danish produce merchants who have come to regard Scotland as a sort of private market for their bacon, eggs and cheese, are inclined to view with alarm the return of Great Britain's national government by so overwhelming a majority.

A tariff on agricultural imports from Denmark would be bad enough, but they fear that Great Britain might inaugurate some system of import regulation which would limit Danish exports to a fraction of the present amount.

Paris, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—The newspaper Le Temps, in commenting on the results of the British elections, said today they interpreted the will of the people to save themselves and to defend themselves against those menacing the established order.

The repercussions will be profound on Great Britain's internal and general policy, it was said, and there were reasons to believe they will reaffirm confidence in the nation's standing.

London Press Reactions.

London, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—The Daily Express, owned by Lord Beaverbrook, appeared this morning under a streaming banner headline declaring: "The Socialist party is wiped out!" The paper said yesterday's election was a "triumph for imperial protection."

The Daily Mail's headline was similar. It was: "Socialist party swamped by huge wave of patriotism!" One factor in the result, the Mail said, was "the growing enthusiasm of the electorate for a tariff."

There were a few notes of a different kind, however, amid the chorus of exultation from Conservative papers. They came from the small section of the press, which either sided with Labor in the spectacular campaign or, like David Lloyd George, was out of sympathy with the election altogether.

While papers like the Times and Daily Telegraph foresaw great good for the nation as a result of the National government's victory, which they forecast, the Labor Daily Herald predicted a wave of suffering from "full-blooded reactionary rule."

Spirit of Optimism Seen By Writers in Great Britain

(Associated Press.)

Injection of a new spirit of optimism in world affairs was seen as one of the major results of the British election by representative American editorial writers whose opinions were compiled in a Nation-wide symposium.

A brighter outlook for world-wide security, repudiation of socialistic doctrines, proof of a theory that Great Britain always goes conservative in times of a crisis, and an indication of the soundness of British public opinion, were some of the outstanding opinions expressed by the newspapers.

New York Times—There is one element in this expression of the popular will which stands out so conspicuously as to be unmistakable. It is the desire for a government with a dependable majority of its own in the House of Commons, which will indulge in no wild experiments of extravagance, but will strive above all things for stability, sound financial administration and the wise conduct of foreign affairs.

New York Sun—Voters of Great Britain have demonstrated * * * it pays to tell the truth to the people. The MacDonald national ministry has been rewarded for its bluntness in regard to national finances, unemployment and business conditions by a landslide mandate to carry on with emergency measures.

Boston Transcript—Americans will be glad of the triumph of national commonsense in Britain.

Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution—The commonsense of the British electorate has won great victory and the result will be to stabilize the kingdom, restore confidence in its honor and solvency, and retain in its government a full measure of power to influence the councils and the conduct of other world powers.

New Orleans (La.) States—The triumph of the National government was not unexpected. British people never fail to meet a crisis. American people, as a whole, will read the returns with a feeling of relief.

Kansas City Star—The tremendous landslide can not fail to have a stabilising effect. * * * The election is thoroughgoing repudiation of Socialist doctrine by the British people.

Chicago Evening Post—The outcome of the election is distinctly a long step forward in economic reconstruction for an important member of the world family of nations.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch—It is difficult to see a clear road ahead for the National Government. * * * The British voters * * * have shown remarkable conservatism and forbearance.

Des Moines Tribune—The landslide for a moderate government, not committed to radical experiments, will be regarded in every country as a proof that sober and prudent judgment is asserting itself in the affairs of nations. * * * Optimism, not pessimism, will be injected into the world situation.

St. Paul Pioneer Press—The immediate result of the election must be to contribute new confidence everywhere in the world. The election is an announcement that England wishes to go in for stability and reconstruction of business on the foundations of the existing economic system.

Minneapolis Tribune—The coalition's sweeping victory should serve to restore confidence in Great Bitain. * * * the nation * * * can buckle down to work with a sense of calmness and stability.

Omaha World-Herald—It is an unprecedented thing that MacDonald has done, because he deserted his party and led the opposition into power * * * all in order to overcome an emergency which he believes threatened the nation's survival."

Denver Post: Financial distress, unemployment and all the other economic ills with which a modern nation can be afflicted have not in any way inclined England to Bolshevism. In a time of emergency the voters have turned from socialism to conservatism.

Oklahoma City Times: The election makes you take your belt up a notch and feel a little proud your forbears were British. * * * Establishment of the National party under the leadership of Ramsay MacDonald is the most heartening thing that has happened this year. * * * There is much of world security in the sanity of the British voters expressed at the polls.

Seattle Times: Ramsay MacDonald's victory is another proof of the soundness of British public opinion. The value of the British currency has been safeguarded and British credit has been preserved.

Oakland (Cal.) Tribune: Britain has announced to the world it is going to carry through its plans for rehabilitation. * * * The gain in confidence in Britain's future will be immediately noticeable at home and abroad.

NAN BRITTON TRIAL BARES DIVORCE ROW

Records Reveal Author Cited as Corespondent; Child Barred From Court.

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Records introduced in Federal Court today in Nan Britton's $50,000 libel suit against C. A. Klunk, Marion hotel operator, for defamation of character, revealed the author of "The President's Daughter" was named as corespondent in a divorce proceedings instituted by the wife of Richard M. Whiteman, New York.

Whiteman, according to the petition of his wife, Patricia, was actual author of the plaintiff's book, or in literary parlance, was "ghost writer" for Nan Britton.

The records were part of the defense's efforts to prove that the plaintiff's character had not been injured by publication of the book, "The Answer to The President's Daughter," which Klunk advertised and sold at his hotel.

Among character witnesses testifying against the plaintiff's reputation, was Mrs. Mildred Christian Roberts, sister of George B. Christian, jr., secretary to former President Warren G. Harding.

Elizabeth Ann, the plaintiff's 12-year-old daughter, was not in court today.

Elizabeth Ann, 12, must be kept from the courtroom during the prosecution of the libel suit, Federal Judge John M. Killits ordered.

The court told Miss Britton's attorneys that the girl should not be permitted to hear testimony that is likely to be presented, including the reading of extracts from "The President's Daughter," and from "The Answer to the President's Daughter."

Auto Construction Change Forecast

Detroit (U.P.).—Automobiles of the future will have "teardrop" bodies to make for greater speed without the added expense of bigger motors and more cylinders, Louis Ruthenberg, of the Copeland Products Co., told members of the Detroit Branch of the Society of Automotive Engineers at their annual production dinner.

"In 1942 we shall realize we were building automobiles 'wrong end to,'" Ruthenberg said. "Today's autos look like fish swimming with the tail foremost."

Doll Hungry Girls Deplete Rag Doll Stock

Detroit (U.P.).—Out of a tangle of old stockings, dresses and shoes, ingenious employes of the Detroit Department of Recreation created a row of rag dolls.

The rag figures, with button eyes, were placed on display on the off chance that perhaps some little girl might want one. Within a few hours every one of the dolls had been adopted. Officials plan the manufacture of rag dolls as a regular part of their work.

When Washington Was Younger—No. 89

BACK in those days this was considered quite an adventure. And judging by reports of road conditions at that time it was a reckless one.

Here we see a party of the Capital's pioneer motorists on the start of a ten-day tour to Atlantic City and New York in 1906. E. H. Neumeyer, one of the occupants of the car, and now head of the Neumeyer Motor Co., reports that the entire trip was successfully negotiated. Atlantic City was reached by nightfall after fourteen hours driving. The car was a Columbia.

Other members of the party were Frank P. Hall and Adolph Loehl, now deceased, and Edward Zea, who is living in Washington. Note the special coats which were necessary as a protection from dust.

ARKANSAS PASTOR IS FACING ARREST

Warrant Charges He Wed Couple Illegally; Figured in Church Row.

Jonesboro, Ark., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—A warrant charging he performed an illegal marriage ceremony was issued today for the Rev. Joe Jeffers, Baptist evangelist and a principal in a church controversy here recently, that grew in violence until troops were sent to preserve order.

The warrant was based on accusations that he married Jesse Nance, of Flint, Mich., and Miss Celestine Byrd, of Grubbs, Ark., October 15, without being qualified under Arkansas laws to perform nuptial ceremonies. He was out of the city today, but authorities said the warrant would be served when he returns.

The Rev. Mr. Jeffers started a series of evangelistic meetings in a tent here two months ago and began a campaign to oust Dr. D. H. Heard, pastor of the First Baptist Church, of Jonesboro, on charges of conduct unbecoming a minister.

That brought about a division in the congregation, and finally the factionalism resulted in a fist fight at the church. Another outbreak occurred on the City Hall Square the next day, and Gov. Parnell then sent national guardsmen who patroled the town until quiet was restored.

Last Sunday night Jeffers' tent was burned under circumstances that led authorities to suspect incendiarism.

CONTEMPT OF COURT CHARGED TO LAWYER

Marcum Must Appear in Alimony Case to Be Sentenced.

Chief Justice A. A. Wheat, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday signed an order adjudging Philip H. Marcum, a special attorney in the office of the Attorney General, in contempt of court for his failure to meet the alimony payments decreed by the court several months ago when Mrs. Marcum was awarded a limited divorce and alimony.

Marcum was not in court yesterday when his attorney, Richard L. Merrick, argued the contempt order before Justice Wheat. His absence forced a postponement of actual confinement and he will appear today, according to the court's instructions, to learn his fate.

Marcum last week won a victory when Chief Justice Wheat ruled that the laws here did not compel a husband to pay his wife's attorney's fees, except during litigation. Once the litigation has been ended, the court is without power to make the husband pay the lawyers who represented his wife.

Marcum filed an affidavit of prejudice against Justice Jesse C. Adkins three weeks ago when a hearing on his domestic tribulations was on. The limited divorce granted Mrs. Marcum is now being appealed in the Court of Appeals.

Village Crops Put Farm Relief Need in Rear

Cornish, Me. (U.P.).—All in all, Cornish doesn't seem to be in immediate need of farm relief. A check-up of local harvests shows these bright spots:

Cucumbers weighing 4½ pounds apiece, grown by Clarence Lord.

A 12½-pound muskmelon, grown by George Perry.

Four squashes weighing a total of 106 pounds, grown by William Hutchins.

A 19-pound cabbage and a 2-pound potato, grown by Art Colcord.

Domestic Science Tests Win Girl College Fund

Westfield, Mass. (U.P.).—Marguerite Clark, high school senior, is earning the money with which to attend Massachusetts State College next year by competing in tests of domestic science.

She won first prize of $100 in the home economic contest at Brockton Fair, $60 for baking the best cake in a contest at State College and $25 for winning a canning contest in Hampden County.

CANNON LISTS 16 CHARGES UPON WHICH HE WOULD SUE

Cannon bought and sold stock through Kaple & Co., knowing it to be a bucketshop.

"Fifth: Bishop Cannon violated the Federal corrupt practices act by making af alse statement of campaign expenditures.

"Sixth: Bishop Cannon was guilty of a fraudulent conversion to his private use of campaign funds contributed for use in the 1928 election.

"Seventh: Bishop Cannon ran away to Europe to escape being present at the hearing of the Nye committee on August 26-29, 1931.

"Eighth: Bishop Cannon has sought to hide his culpability behind the skirts of a woman secretary.

"Ninth. The Attorneys for Mr. Goldhurst employed as attorney of record Bishop Cannon's Washington lawyer, a former professional associate and then office mate of an influential Virginia politician.

"Tenth. Bishop Cannon was sufficiently influential to have the indictments against Mr. Goldhurst confined for the conduct of the case to a former female student of Bishop Cannon.

"Eleventh. Bishop Cannon was a party to an attempt at bribery of the above mentioned assistant district attorney by the giving of costly gifts as an inducement to pigeonhole the indictments.

Seizing of Papers.

"Twelfth. Bishop Cannon visited New York with one of his attorneys, after which visit all the papers raided and seized in Mr. Goldhurst's illicit bucket shop were tightly sealed and access to them denied by the United States district attorney, even to the referee in bankruptcy.

"Thirteenth. Bishop Cannon and the Virginia politician referred to in paragraph nine had an interview with Mr. Goldhurst at a hotel in New York City, and immediately after this interview Bishop Cannon unexpectedly sailed for Brazil.

"Fourteenth. There was a compact made in New York, to which Bishop Cannon was a party, which promised clemency to Mr. Goldhurst if he would plead guilty in order to avert the necessity of summoning Bishop Cannon as a witness in his case.

"Fifteenth. Bishop Cannon was a party to the removal of Mr. Goldhurst from the Federal prison at Atlanta to Fort Meade, near Washington, and was a party to the action taken by the Parole Board in ordering Mr. Goldhurst's release in April, 1932.

Warns of Suits.

"Sixteenth. If it were conceivably possible, in the face of recent disclosures, for anybody to libel Bishop Cannon, the News would not know how to go about it.

"If the Lynchburg News and the Lynchburg Advance will publish these statements editorially, thus assuming full responsibility, in the positive form indicated, without adopting Senator Glass' favorite method of inuendo and insinuation, suits for libel will be instituted against both papers, and the facts will be brought out as over against the inuendoes and insinuations made by Senator Glass in the frequent attacks made by him upon Bishop Cannon during the last three years.

"In view of the continued implication of his fearlessness and courage which pervades all public utterances of Senator Glass, it is certainly to be expected that the above-mentioned sixteen charges will be printed in the editorial columns of the papers controlled by him, the papers assuming full responsibility for said publication."

Glass Says He Prefers To Let Courts Proceed

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—United States Senator Carter Glass stated tonight that "for the present" he preferred to leave Bishop James Cannon, jr., "to the courts and the congressional committee authorized to inquire into the grave criminal charges against him."

The senator's statement was contained in a brief reply to a statement by the prelate that he could have his newspapers, the Lynchburg News and Daily Advance sued for libel by publishing editorially any of sixteen charges the bishop listed.

The News and Advance planned to publish the Cannon statement in full with no other comment than that contained in Senator Glass' statement.

The statement follows:

"Apparently for consumption by the Virginia annual conference of the Methodist Church in session at Norfolk a year ago, Bishop Cannon instituted suit for the modest sum of $5,000,000 against a certain newspaper publisher for alleged libel. Collection on account being a little tardy, he now, for apparent consumption by the Virginia Methodist conference in session in Lynchburg, threatens to sue me for an undesignated sum should my newspapers think him of sufficient importance to repeat some of the things that the press and responsible persons from one end of the country to the other have been saying for a long time. I prefer, for the present, to leave this gentleman to the courts and to the congressional committee authorized to inquire into the grave criminal charges against him."

Cannon's Arraignment Delayed Until Monday

(Associated Press.)

Bishop James Cannon, jr., will stand before the bar of justice next Monday to answer charges he willfully violated Federal law.

At his attorney's request, arraignment of the gray, 62-year-old Southern Methodist churchman on an indictment growing out of his prominent political activities in 1928 was postponed from tomorrow, the day originally set.

Assistant District Attorney John Wilson, prosecutor of the Government's case, annqunced the changed date. No reason was assigned for the delay except that of accommodation to the clergyman's attorney. Bishop Cannon declined to comment.

The bishop, whose thin figure has become familiar to more than one Senate committee, will come before Justice James Proctor in the criminal division of the District of Columbia Supreme Court to answer a grand jury finding listing violation of the Federal corrupt practices law under ten counts.

With him will appear Miss Ada L. Burroughs, of Richmond, Va., treasurer of his anti-Smith Democrats committee, whose alleged failure to report all campaign fund contributions and expenditures is the basis of the indictment. The jury charged conspiracy to withhold a complete accounting of gifts from Edwin C. Jameson, New York capitalist and Republican.

Cotrustee Replies To Mrs. McLean

Trust Company Opposes Removal of Publisher From Estate.

The American Security & Trust Co., named as a codefendant in its capacity as cotrustee of the John R. McLean estate, yesterday filed its answer to a suit by Mrs. Evalyn Lucille Walsh McLean, who asked that her husband, Edward B. McLean, publisher of The Post, be removed as a trustee of the estate.

The answer said that Mr. McLean's absences from the city have prevented personal conferences, but, the trust company stated, it has been able in urgent matters to communicate with him through his counsel. The trust company also denied it "had frequently" demanded the resignation of Mr. McLean as trustee.

The trust company denied that it had any knowledge of the personal conduct, private relations, or business affairs and practices of Mr. McLean. The company pointed out that the equity court of the District Supreme Court has never relinquished jurisdiction of the McLean estate, which it assumed several years ago.

Driver of Tiny Auto Offers 'Supreme Insult'

San Francisco (U.P.).—It really happened, here in San Francisco.

Of course, you've heard those stories about the midget automobile running under the truck.

Down on the Embarcadero, as San Francisco's waterfront is known, they have lumber-carrying trucks which straddle a pile of lumber, pick it up and cart it away.

One of those cars, caught in a traffic jam, scooted under the straddle truck, the driver waved his hand and scurried away.

Pennsylvania Mines Set New Safety Record

Harrisburg, Pa. (U.P.).—A new record for safety has been established by Pensylvania's bituminous mines, which produce more than one-fourth of the coal output in the United States.

The State's soft-coal mines have operated since March 21, 1929, without a major accident. At the present rate, fatalities in the bituminous mines during 1931 should be well under 200.

The Department of Mines estimated that during the year 500,000 tons of coal will be mined per fatality.

MOSES GRANTS HOUSE CONTROL TO DEMOCRA

December because of the election laws.

Loss of this district cuts th Republican advantage to one vote, even if the party's candidates are successful in four special elections in traditionally Republican districts.

Democrats expect to fill the two other vacancies without difficulty and are assaulting Republican strongholds in the First Ohio and the Eighth Michigan Districts.

The present line-up gives the Democrats 214 seats, Republicans 213, Farmer-Labor 1 and 7 vacancies.

If the special elections bring no change in the normal political status of the districts concerned, if the New Hampshire seat remains unfilled until January, and if there are no deaths or resignations, the line-up when Congress convenes will be: Republicans, 217 seats; Democrats, 216; Farmer-Labor, 1.

In the meantime Representative Hawley, of Oregon, chairman of the Republican caucus, will issue a formal call for a conference to thresh out the contest over who will be nominated by the party to succeed the late Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, as candidate for Speaker.

Hawley recently dispatched telegrams to leading Republicans asking them if November 30, a week before Congress meets, would be a satisfactory date. Representative Wood said the leaders were agreed on it.

Notifications are to be sent out by Representative Clarke, of New York, caucus secretary, soon.

At a conference in February the Republicans named Representative Tilson as floor leader, after renominating Longworth for Speaker. Tilson and Representative Snell, of New York, for six years chairman of the rules committee, are outstanding candidates for the nomination.

Other Republicans, including Mapes and Michener, of Michigan; Hoch, of Kansas; Luce, of Massachusetts, and Ramseyer, of Iowa, also have been suggested as compromise candidates.

The Republican Independents also are threatening to put forward a Speakership candidate in event certain requests for the liberalization of the rules and committee assignments are not met. They also are demanding that certain policies of the regular party leaders be changed.

CAPONE BODYGUARD SENTENCED TO JAIL

Federal Judge Denounces Organized Intimidation of Witnesses.

Chicago, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Al Capone's income tax trial had a rousing aftermath in Federal court today as the gang chief and his followers were denounced for "intimidating" witnesses, and the bodyguard who brought a loaded pistol into court was sentenced to six months in jail.

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, who sentenced Capone to eleven years imprisonment, adjudged Bodyguard Philip D'Andrea in contempt of court and ordered him locked up for six months.

Before sentencing D'Andrea and then allowing him two weeks' freedom so he could visit his sick mother, Judge Wilkerson read a prepared statement dealing mainly with the conduct of the Capone. He said:

"It clearly appears from the facts and circumstances before the court in this proceeding and at the trial of United States versus Capone, that this respondent's activities were linked with those of an organized body of men whose outlaw camp is at the Lexington Hotel. Of this body, defendant Capone was chief.

"To this camp at the Lexington were summoned witnesses who testified to the defendant Capone's losses on horse races. * * * And from that camp, under what coercive influences we can only conjecture from what transpired in court, came that array of shocking perjury with which the court was confronted during the closing days of the trial.

"It is perfectly clear from a long array of conclusive circumstances that this band exercises coercive interest over those with whom it comes in contact, which is nothing less than insurrection against the laws of the United States."

Sleuthing Brings Murder Charge

Kansas City Man Tries to Catch Robber; Admits Slaying.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Albert Silk's homespun sleuthing methods brought him face to face with a murder charge today. In an attempt to solve the robbery of his fruit store and his home, Silk took a Negro employe, Damon Verder, into the wilds of Swope Park and demanded a confession.

Verder made a break for freedom. The Negro, shot in the abdomen, was rescued from a stream in which he fell. He died today from the wound.

Authorities said Silk made a statement in which he said he shot his employe when Verder attempted to run, after denying the robberies.

Col. Tupper Describes Civilization of Incas

Communistic systems instituted by the Inca civilization in Peru between 2,000 and 4,000 years ago yesterday were outlined before the Lions Club by Col. William Tupper, traveler and lecturer, at a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel.

Col. Tupper described how the Inca's divided property and apportioned land among newborn children. He detailed the early Americans' skill as builders and artisans, and told of their contributions to medicine and science. L. W. De Gast presided.

to bring the court up to full strength as soon as possible.

Mr. O'Donoghue was born in Georgetown 55 years ago. He has practiced law in Washington since 1900 and has never been a candidate for or held a public office. It is stated that he was reluctant to allow his name to be considered, but the Attorney General is understood to have been very favorably impressed with his record as a practicing attorney in Washington.

He was educated in the public schools of Georgetown and graduated from Georgetown University, receiving his law degree in 1900. He was admitted to the Washington bar the same year, and was elected president of the association in 1925. He was elected to the faculty of the Georgetown University Law School in 1904 and at present occupies the chair of equity and common jurisprudence and law pleading.

Mr. O'Donoghue said last night that he "was in no position to comment" on the reports that he was a leading candidate for the vacant court position.

REPRIEVED SLAYER FIGHTS AT HEARING

Breaks Loose and Attacks Prosecutor at Trial on Sanity.

Chicago, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Frank Bell, the only one of five convicted murderers reprieved an hour before they were sentenced to die recently, fought loose from four bailiffs at a sanity hearing in criminal court today and attacked his prosecutors, knocking one unconscious.

Bell went on the rampage as the morning session of his trial was adjourned. He rushed at Ross Lee Laird, assistant State's attorney, and felled him with a blow on the back of the neck. Then he let his fist fly at Prosecutor Walker Butler's jaw.

Guards quickly pounced upon the killer and dragged him to his cell in the county jail.

Bell, known as the "squealer" since he confessed the murder of a restaurant proprietor and implicated Richard Sullivan, escaped being executed with Sullivan and three others October 16 when a writ arrived at the death cell granting a sanity test a half hour before the scheduled electrocution. Alienists have examined him, the State physician pronouncing him legally sane, and were to give expert testimony at the trial just begun.

U. S. Trade Body Policy Blamed for Competition

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—R. T. Brooks, president of the George A. Just Co., of New York, told the American Institute of Steel Construction here today that the Federal Trade Commission has "failed entirely" in its endeavor to relieve business of malpractices through its code of trade practice procedure.

Mr. Brooks recommended that the industry attempt, through political action, to obtain "some relief from the intolerable competitive conditions against which at present there is no legal redress."

Coffee Group Protests U. S. Barter in Product

Chicago, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Protest against further deals in coffee by the Government-sponsored Grain Stabilization Corporation was voiced today by the National Coffee Roasters' Association convention.

A resolution aimed at the recent barter by the corporation of 25,000,000 bushels of wheat for 132,000,000 pounds of Brazilian coffee was adopted. It stated "the association is unalterably opposed to the principle of further extension of governmental operations in the field of private business."

Man Found Guilty At Slaying Trial

Sentence in Prince Georges Is Delayed Pending Another Case.

A verdict of manslaughter was returned yesterday by a Prince Georges County jury, which tried William Landis Lewis, colored, for the slaying of Harry E. Cook, also colored. Lewis has not been sentenced, because he is also awaiting trial on another indictment charging him with the murder of Ernest Brown.

William Stevenson, who pleaded guilty to selling from a wagon without a license, was fined $20. This is the first case of this kind ever to be tried in the circuit court. Trial of David Godbolt for breaking into the house of George Branson was indefinitely postponed when he pleaded guilty to another indictment charging him with larceny of $6 in groceries from James Hall.

A jury decided that Roy Jefferson, colored, living near Hyattsville, was not guilty of assault and battery and a statutory offense.

BURGESS COLLAPSES AT BUREAU SESSION

Suffers Hemorrhage Attack and Is in Undetermined Condition.

The condition of Dr. George K. Burgess, director of the Bureau of Standards, last night was described as undetermined by physicians at Emergency Hospital, where he was removed after being stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage yesterday morning, while presiding over a meeting of division chiefs at the bureau.

Dr. F. R. Brunot, of the Public Health Service, examined Dr. Burgess after his collapse and took him to the hospital. Officials of the bureau quoted Dr. Brunot as saying the hemorrhage was "slight."

The scientist, who is 65 years old, did not lose consciouaness, but became so dizzy that he had to be borne from the building on a stretcher. He remained conscious at the hospital.

Dr. Burgess, who was born in Newton, Mass., has been head of the bureau for more than ten years. A scientist of international note, he was educated at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and in Paris and England.

The author of several books on scientific subjects, he was an instructor at Massachusetts Tech and the Universities of Michigan and California before coming to the bureau as assistant physicist in 1903.

Dr. Burgess was scheduled to speak before the American Society of Automotive Engineers last night at the Shoreham Hotel. His residence is at 1613 Harvard street northwest.

U. S. AND NEW YORK STUDY POWER ISSUE

authorities in an endeavor to arrive at some conclusion, based on an expediency rather than constitutional prerogatives.

Although the St. Lawrence project does not fit in with the views of the administration, preferring private developments of power plants rather than public developments, the opportunities that will be afforded unemployment by the St. Lawrence scheme will doubtless work in its favor.

Precedents were recalled yesterday wherein the Federal Government, through its constitutional right to the sovereignty over all navigable streams, was able to refuse or withhold permits through the Secretary of War for the construction of dams across such streams.

If the War Department should refuse the permit for the construction of a dam across the St. Lawrence, the power house could not be built; and if the power house could not be built, there would be no water-developed power. In the case of an inland stream the rights of the War Department, as representative of Federal authority, would naturally be unquestioned. In the St. Lawrence scheme, however, an international situation is created by the perfectly coexistent rights of the Dominion government and the Province of Ontario. In the first case the matter calls for direct negotiation between the Federal Government and the Canadian government on the one hand and between the Federal Government and the State of New York on the other. The two negotiations will have to be made pari passu.

Gov. Roosevelt has frequently sent Charles R. Russell, formerly solicitor of the Federal Power Commission, to the State Department with requests that action on the project be taken. He himself made a trip through the region some weeks ago and saw at first hand the extent and scope of the proposed construction. However, it was necessary to sound out the Canadian government and secure full Canadian cooperation and consent before any negotiations could be undertaken between the Federal Government and the State of New York.

Some years ago, when Col. Henry L. Stimson, the present Secretary of State, was Secretary of War, an important decision was made by the Federal Government in the case of the Coosa Dam project. The President, Mr. Taft, vetoed a proposition which would have disposed of rights to regulate a dam and produce electricity to the State alone, without any Federal jurisdiction being acknowledged.

Since that time, however, the Federal power act was brought into being, and its provisions are based very largely on the constitutional decisions, such as the Coosa decision, which were previously held as valid and constitutional.

Roosevelt Holds State Has Water Power Say

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Although Gov. Roosevelt found a measure of satisfaction in today's waterways conference in Washington, he was represented as holding his contention that the waterways-power development problem could not be settled unless New York was consulted on all phases of the project.

The governor, it was understood, thought the State Department's assertion that the factor of power distribution was one to be studied by both State and Federal officials, was an "opening wedge."

Mr. Roosevelt has persistently declared the power development, distribution and construction of waterways canals were linked together. He has held that New York representatives should sit in with State Department representatives in all negotiations, excepting those having to do with boundary fixations.

Snowden Sees Vote As National Victory

Ballots Prove Britain Is Standing Four Square, Says Chancelor.

London, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Philip Snowden, who followed Ramsay MacDonald into the National government as chancellor of the exchequer, said today that he did not rejoice "at the disaster which has come to the Labor party."

The chancellor emphasized that yesterday's voting resulted in a National government victory and not in the tory of any one party.

"Millions of men and women have voted for candidates with whose general political views they are not in agreement on the sole ground of showing the world that Britain is determined to stand four square and bring the nation through its difficulties," Mr. Snowden said.

Market Is Cheered By Results of Vote

Wall Street Considers Conservative Victory Good News.

New York, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Wall street was in the main inclined to regard the Conservative victory in England as good news today, but the stock market seemed preoccupied with the low state of corporate earnings at home, and prices were under considerable pressure.

Foreign bonds were inclined to advance, presumably a reflection of the British election results, but the United Kingdom issues showed little change at the close. The pound sterling failed to rally, ruling $3.90¼, off one-half cent.

Shares generally lost about $1 to $6, and the domestic bonds were moderately heavy. There was a fairly active flurry of selling in the stock market during the morning. A quiet upturn occurred during the afternoon, but it was virtually lost in fresh selling in the last few minutes. The turnover of 1,750,000 shares was the largest in a week.

Army Seeks Sale Of Alaska's Radio

Draws Bill Similar to That Whcih Failed in Last Congress.

(Associated Press.)

The War Department is preparing to seek authorization at the coming session of Congress to sell the Washington State-Alaska military cable and radio system. A bill identical with that which failed to get action at the last session has been drawn by the department's legislative division.

The bill would authorize the Secretary of War to sell to the highest responsible bidder who is a citizen of the United States, all or part of the system which now is operated by the Army Signal Corps on a commercial basis.

The system includes cable lines and 36 radio stations connecting Seattle with Alaskan cities and towns northward to Point Barrow. It was established in the early gold rush days to provide a line of communication for troops in Alaska.

RAILROAD OFFICIALS MEET COMMISSION

Surcharge Pool Proposal Ss Discussed in Short Conference.

(Associated Press.)

Railroad chieftains got together yesterday, decided what they thought was wrong with the Interstate Commerce Commission's plan for increasing revenues, and then told the commission about it.

They worked until after 4 p. m., making notes of their differences of opinion on how the surcharge-pooling proposal of the transportation tribunal can best be administered. Without more than a breathing spell recess, they went to the commission's offices.

Preliminary Meeting.

It was intimated when the meeting ended two hours afterward that the talk with commission members was just preliminary; that the purpose had been to sound out the tribunal on changes.

The men who took their case to headquarters were: W. R. Cole, president of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad; H. A. Scandrett, of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific; J. J. Pelley, of the New Haven, and Alfred P. Thom, counsel for the Association of Railway Executives. They are members of the advisory committee of the association, which met earlier behind closed doors.

They had studied the commission's report in the 15 per cent rate case and the instructions given them at last week's meeting of the association in Atlantic City.

While the railroad men conferred at the association offices, President Hoover and Senator Couzens discussed railways and taxes at the White House. There was nothing from the Chief Executive's office, however, to indicate the trend of the conversation. Couzens later said he was finding out if some of his legislative plans met the views of Mr. Hoover.

The Interstate Commerce Commission last week flatly rejected a petition from the railroads for a 15 per cent freight rate increase. Such a step would be bad both for the carriers and the country, the decision said. The commission suggested placing surcharges on all freight bills except for farm products. It outlined the plan in detail and fixed December 1 as the time limit for acceptance and the span of the scheme's life as sixteen months.

Commission Decision.

The commission's decision came only 36 hours before the annual meeting of the association at Atlantic City. First reactions were in opposition and were in line with objections to such a plan expressed during the rate hearings.

Later, however, some executives said they saw the proposal as the only way of increasing railroad revenues, short of a wage cut, which would take months. The association directed the advisory committee to take up with the commission the question of clarifying some parts of the plan and modifying others.

The chief objections of the richer roads, it was said by one executive, lay in details of operation and payment of money to needy lines. The committee is understood to have been directed to ask that the commission amend its scheme that weeker lines would receive loans from the pool instead of gifts. It also was to ascertain the full extent of the freedom of the carriers in operating the plan.

Seeks Modification.

Chairman Brainerd yesterday was in Tulsa, Okla. Other members of the commission were here, however, including Chairman Meyer of Division seven, which heard the rate case, and Commissioners Lewis, Lee, Eastman and Porter, members of the division.

That efforts will be made this winter to modify or strengthen laws regulating railroads and transportation generally is regarded as certain. Besides Senator Couzens' visit yesterday to the President, Grenville Clark, New York, and Charles Evans Hughes, jr., attorneys for security holders in the rate case, Tuesday called on Walter Newton, a presidential secretary, to discuss railroad legislation.

The commission has asked repeal or modification of several sections of the law under which it acts. This applies particularly to the excess income recapture provisions, which the rail tribunal has held impossible of proper administration.

Wife's First Shot Kills Bear and Saves Spouse

Biloxi, Miss., Oct. 27 (A.P.).—A woman who had never fired a gun, shot a bear here today and saved her husband's life.

Joseph Lamas, keeper of the Naval Reserve Park Zoo, was attacked by the bear in its cage. His small son, standing near by screamed for help and Mrs. Lamas, armed with a shotgun, came running. She dashed into the cage, fired twice and the bear fell dead.

Lamas was bitten severely in his arms and legs.

$50,000 Slander Trial Under Way

Suit Outgrowth of Strife in Dallas Woman's Democratic Legaue.

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Four Texas husbands, one of them the superintendent of the Texas Antisaloon League, found themselves innocently involved in a $50,000 damage suit, alleging slanderous statements, which went to trial today.

The suit was brought by John W. Woods, former speaker of the House of Representatives, and his wife, Mrs. Helen Woods, against Mrs. Della Beard, Mrs. Atticus Webb (whose husband is the Antisaloon League executive), Mrs. Mittie B. Haefer, Mrs. Annie M. Jameson, Lillian Hannah and Mrs. Lulu Tubbs, a widow. It alleged slanderous statements were made as an outgrowth of internal strife in the Dallas Woman's Democratic League.

Judge W. M. Taylor told jurymen today the husbands of the married women, also named, were merely formal parties to the suit, because a wife can not be used in Texas unless her husband is sued with her.

MRS. WHOLEAN HITS INQUIRY BY COURTS

Attorney Files Objection to Being Required to Prove Her Heirship.

Mrs. Beatrice Henderson Wholean yesterday attacked the right of a probate court to inquire into her claims of heirship to the estate of Mrs. Mary F. Henderson on the ground that a probate court did not have jurisdiction to make such an investigation.

Mrs. Wholean, through Attorney H. Prescott Gatley, filed objections to being required, in a probate court, to defend her claims of heirship. Her petition was filed as a counter-attack on the petition of George E. Edelin, named as executor under Mrs. Henderson's last will, which in turn had been filed as an answer to a protest lodged by Mrs. Wholean against admission to probate of the last will.

In his answer, Mr. Edelin had set up the lack of claim on Mrs. Henderson's part because of her disputed parentage. Mrs. Wholean claims to be the sole heir of Mrs. Henderson, and under that position, she said, she was entitled to attack the validity of the last will of Mrs. Henderson, which cut her off.

Attorney Gatley said that Mrs. Henderson moved for the adoption of Mrs. Wholean, then unmarried, in December, 1924, and did not attack that adoption's legality until February, 1931. The court was about to accept Mrs. Henderson's petition to declare the adoption null when the information of her death reached this city.

CASTAWAYS ARE DUE AT CANAL THIS WEEK

Rescue Gunboat Stands Off Cocos Island as Crew Collects Property.

Balboa, Canal Zone, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—The American gunboat Sacramento, which rescued three Americans who had been marooned for more than six months, stood by today off Cocos Island in the South Pacific while its crew collected the equipment of the castaways.

Rear Admiral N. E. Irwin, commandant here, radioed the commander of the gunboat to use his own discretion regarding the return and it may be the end of the week before the men reach Balboa with a detailed story of their experiences.

Additional information said the refugees, Paul Stachwick, Gordon Brawner and Elmer J. Palliser, were spotted on the south coast of the island yesterday by Chief Quartermaster Michelfelder, while the Sacramento was a mile and a half from shore. When they came aboard it was found they had no clothing.

They had saved razors and scissors from the wreck of their yawl and had taken turns at tonsorial work.

Completion of Defunct Apartment Is Arranged

Completion of an unfinished eight-story apartment building at 1417 N street northwest, begun by Frank Tomlinson, builder and architect in 1930, and halted by the failure of the real estate firm of Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey, will be effected by Mr. Tomlinson, it was announced yesterday by Paul Lesh, attorney, who bought it for $52,000 at a foreclosure sale held to clear title.

Mr. Lesh bought the building as a member of a committee composed of C. Clinton James and Louis Ottenberg, who represents about 90 per cent of holders of Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey notes issued on the building for the construction loan. It was announced that an arrangement had been made between Mr. Tomlinson and the noteholders in which he had agreed to complete the structure, turn it over to the noteholdes through their committee and when they are paid in full, assume his equity in the building. The amount represented is $200,000. Vernon G. Owen, of Thomas J. Owen & Son, was the auctioneer.

Gosnell Denies Favoring Any for County Manager

Fred A. Gosnell, of Country Club Hills, a candidate for the Arlington County board, last night denied rumors that he would support a certain person for the office of county manager. He said:

"I have not nor will I, prior to the election, promise to support or encourage the consideration of any person as county manager, nor do I at the present time know any certain available person whom I would support for this position. If elected, I will use my best effort to obtain the services of the best qualified man that can be employed at a reasonable salary."

be confined as a menace to society, saying Hubert knew the difference between right and wrong when he stole from stores and killed the sheriff.

Defense counsel did not ask that he be freed, but that he be confined in the penitentiary or an institution. He was bright, but normal, they said, and was a victim to an heriditary tendency toward insanity and of a sorbid home environment.

"I am an old man," said Prosecutor E. E. Halsey, "and this lad's life lies ahead of him. There are cases when I demand the Mosaic law of an eye for an eye, a life for a life, but I will not ask that in this case. The question is not whether the boy was of unsound mind, but whether, when the crime was committed, he knew the difference between right and wrong.

"He shot Mr. Wormell and the pistol he used, found with the hammer pulled back, indicated he was ready to shoot again."

Defense Attorney A. G. Farley described the sordid surroundings of Hubert's life—his father insane, his mother poverty stricken, without enough food and clothing to care for her seven children, and with slight pleasure in their little house.

"A child is not responsible for his parents," Farley said.

"Of course the boy was lying now and then. Under such conditions we all might lie and steal as our only defense against society. We have had teachers to guide us. There was a vacant place in Hubert's life and he filled it with his imagination."

That, the defense lawyers said, was why Hubert delighted in stories of adventure and in hearing his grandmother, Mrs. Marie Addington, read gory tales from the old testament.

SOCIALISM CRUSHED.

Great Britain has administered a blow to socialism from which it will not soon recover. Never before has a British party won such a smashing victory as that which astonishes the half-hearted Conservatives. Opposition to the national government, which is dominated by the followers of Stanley Baldwin, has been crushed. Parliament will be reassembled with virtually unanimous support for the coalition which Prime Minister MacDonald organized to promote British rehabilitation.

Some fear was expressed that Mr. MacDonald might be defeated because he had been repudiated by the Labor party in his district. But he has won by a substantial majority, in the face of his defiance of the Labor party. The political labor movement in Britain has collapsed. Arthur Henderson, Labor leader, who stepped into the shoes left vacant by Ramsay MacDonald, is defeated, along with nearly 300 other Labor candidates. The British electorate has made almost a clean sweep of the Socialists who called for more dole and no tariff.

Aside from the defeat of the Labor party, the most interesting aspect of the British election is the fact that the former Socialist leader now stands at the head of an antisocialist coalition with more than 555 seats in Parliament. If all of the independent and doubtful seats go to the opposition it will command less than 60 votes. It should be noted, however, that the national coalition is a heterogeneous group. New opposition may be expected to develop from those elements that are lukewarm to the prospective new tariff policy.

It is questionable how long Ramsay MacDonald can continue to head a government with only thirteen party colleagues in a Parliament in which the Conservative party has about 475 seats. The fact that the Conservatives joined hands with Mr. MacDonald and a handful of Liberals instead of going into this election on their own responsibility will probably be counted the greatest blunder in their history. Will Mr. MacDonald become the new Conservative leader? The spectacle of the Tories, who dominate Parliament in their own right, remaining under the guidance of the former Labor chief for any length of time requires too great strain upon the imagination.

The British people have inflicted upon the Labor party no greater condemnation than it deserved. Throughout its administration the party allowed Britain to drift deeper into the bog of economic stagnation. Promised reforms did not materialize. The ship of state was run into the mud by the dole and by socialistic experiments. Industry was given no protection, in spite of the fact that the whole world has gone over to protective tariffs.

The world which had begun to despair of Britain's future will take new hope. John Bull is famous for the way in which he rises up and sweeps all of the debris out of his way when a crisis has reached its climax. Britain has turned a new page. The election should mark the end of disintegration into the slough of socialism and the beginning of a new era of industrial progress.

GRAVITATION AND RADIATION.

A new theory has been evolved by Dr. Albert Einstein, of which he has issued a preliminary survey. The change in Dr. Einstein's conception of the universe, however, does not imply any alteration of his idea of relativity. Ever since the formation of the general theory in 1915 there has been an effort to reduce the laws of the gravitational and electromagnetic fields to a single basis. It appeared inconceivable that these two spacial structures should exist without relation to each other. This problem brought forth theories by Eddington, Weyl and Kaluza. On the concept of "distant parallelism" Einstein and his assistant, Dr. Mayer, worked for a year, and then discovered they were striving in the wrong direction.

The present theory was modeled along the line of Kaluza's system, although the Kaluza theory itself was found not acceptable, mainly because Kaluza postulated a five-dimensional space-time instead of the usual four. The fifth dimension postulate enabled him to obtain field laws which agree in first approximation with the known field laws of both electricity and gravitation, but in the end Einstein found it necessary to "tie up artificially one of these dimensions in order to account for the fact that the fifth dimension does not manifest itself in the physical world of space-time."

The new theory states that the number of vectors or vector-fields need not be limited to the number of dimensions in space-time, and, therefore, Einstein evolves the idea of five vectors or components in the four-dimensional continuum. The full text of his reasoning has not as yet been published, but will shortly be brought out in Pasadena in connection with the investigations he made there last winter. The theory does not contain conclusions as to the quantum theory, but it furnishes a foundation, and, according to Einstein, the results thus far obtained represent a definitive advance in knowledge of the structure of the physical world.

PRACTICAL RELIEF PLANS.

Director Gifford's committee for the promotion of employment has been prompt in the formulation of a program of specific recommendations looking to the recovery of normal business and industrial activity in the United States without waiting for general economic stability throughout the world. It points out, as The Post repeatedly has done, that as the most nearly self-contained nation America has within its own borders the elemental factors necessary for recovery. The wealth of this country, even allowing for the deflation of the depression, is today greater than it was before the World War.

Under the chairmanship of Harry A. Wheeler, of Chicago, the national committee of 20 men, including such important figures as William Green, Daniel Willard, Edward N. Hurley and W. A. Starrett, has completed a program of ten major recommendations looking to the prompt reabsorption of unemployed labor by American industry. In receiving the report from the committee Mr. Gifford adds his approval and urgent recommendation that it be translated into action.

The committee's first suggestion as an aid to restoring normal times is that every citizen now employed resume normal buying, using available income to purchase goods that in turn must be replaced, thus giving more employment. The committee does not urge extravagant buying, but offers its sober judgment that, as a fundamental to all other aids for improvement of conditions, the unifying of public interest and sentiment in this action is absolutely imperative.

Following a comprehensive appeal for the restoration of confidence in the financial and credit structure of the Nation, with liberalization of banking practices to aid legitimate enterprise both established and projected, the report then turns in detail to recommendations for the spreading of work in industrial, commercial and professional enterprises. This is found to be the most fruitful field for immediate unemployment relief. All employers who have not considered the possibilities of distributing available work among the greatest possible number of employes are urged to make immediate survey according to specific suggestions that are set up in the report.

As distinguished from private employes the committee report devotes a chapter to the extensive group in Federal, State and local public service, many of them under civil service rules, who have not been affected by depression unemployment. They are not in a position to divide their working hours or days with others. The committee's suggestion of an alternative is simply that this class must contribute to the full extent of its ability to the funds for general relief work.

The committee did not try to discover sudden panaceas for unemployment or for ending the depression. Its recommendations are the common-sense suggestions of practical men of affairs. They can be put to practical use, and if generally and generously adopted the result will be promptly noticeable in improved conditions.

EXAMPLES FOR THE COURTS.

Al Capone was fatigued by his trial for evasion of the income tax law and planned a long vacation in Florida. It was annoying to have the court find him guilty, but nevertheless Capone went ahead with his packing for the trip. He contemplated a restful vacation in the sunny South while his lawyers carried his appeal to the higher courts. But instead the gangster is spending his vacation in Cook County Jail, and law-abiding citizens throughout the country are rejoicing in the triumph of justice.

This is the second time that Judge James H. Wilkerson, of Chicago, has broken away from slovenly habits of judicial procedure to mete out stern justice to a criminal who has long been stigmatized as a "public enemy." A few months ago Capone went before the court on a series of indictments for violation of the prohibition law. He pleaded guilty. When it was discovered that his plea had been influenced by a bargain with the prosecuting attorney Judge Wilkerson declared that he would not abide by promises of leniency which the prosecution may have made. Capone was therefore allowed to change his plea.

In the present case Judge Wilkerson upset the routine procedure by refusing to allow the gangster bail while he awaits appeal. In both cases the judge struck out at weak points in judicial practice that are responsible for frequent miscarriage of justice. Prosecuting attorneys who either fear to match their wits against clever criminal lawyers, or wish to dispose of difficult cases with the least possible inconvenience, too frequently compromise with crooks and gangsters. Criminals who are certain of their conviction promise to plead guilty and prosecutors agree to recommend light sentences. Justice is thus cheated with the connivance of those selected to defend the rights of the people.

The practice of allowing criminals who have been sentenced to prison terms to remain free under bail while an appeal is taken is destructive of public order. Wealthy criminals who make a practice of defying the law appeal their cases for the purpose of delaying the administration of justice. When a gangster may remain at large after being convicted and sentenced by a competent court the authority of the court seems to be tainted, and the public loses respect for the law. It is well known that in many cases criminals out on bail commit new depredations to pay their fines. The fact that convicted felons may stay the hand of justice by repeated appeals on petty technicalities is unquestionably a factor in the widespread disrespect for law.

The example set by Judge Wilkerson ought not to be lost upon either the State or Federal judiciary.

The next thing we know Congress will pass a law granting pensions to members who suffer from the accidental discharge of their duties.

SHADOW OF CONGRESS

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Six weeks from tomorrow the Seventy-second Congress will meet in regular session. This coming event has been casting its shadow before, and in a most impressive manner, ever since its predecessor quit on March 4. Not since war time, indeed, has an assembling of Congress been awaited with such widespread public interest, not unmixed with anxiety.

While general opinion, especially in business circles, has approved President Hoover's stand against a special session, it is realized that legislative problems of unusual importance will demand attention. And unfortunately their consideration is threatened with a display of partisan and factional politics even exceeding that of the last Congress.

When Congress is ready to take up legislation it will have no lack of subjects before it. Besides the items in the President's message it will have the programs prepared by the insurgents of both houses and by the Democrats, which the country has been hearing so much about during the last summer and fall. When Senator Norris and his fellow insurgents failed to induce Mr. Hoover to call a special session last spring they staged a little one of their own and declared their intention of conducting a continuous performance to acquaint the country with their demands for legislation. It was to be an "educational campaign." It has been at least an illuminating one with regard to the plans of these professional troublemakers, culminating in the recent announcement of their program for putting all the Nation's industries and public utilities, beginning with the railroads, under Government ownership and operation.

On the constructive side the most imperative measure will be one to raise revenue for the Government's running expeses and for meeting a Treasury deficit which may exceed $1,500,000,000, following upon one of $900,000,000. There will be sharp discussion of Secretary Mellon's suggestion for a broader tax base and the tapping of new sources of revenue. Senator Reed will press for a sales tax. The depression will provide the text for proposals to overhaul the banking laws, with special reference to broadening the usefulness of the Federal Reserve System. There will also be proposals for legislation to help the railroads on the basis of the Interstate Commerce Commission's recommendations.

Consideration of the foreign debt moratorium will require early attention, since Congress will assemble December 7 and the next payments to this country fall due December 15. Various other features of President Hoover's foreign relations policy will be the subject of discussion in both branches of Congress. The perennial issue of prohibition will again be to the fore with the organized demand for modification of the Volstead act to permit the sale of beer of larger alcoholic content.

"Giant power," wheat, oil, coal, silver, the tariff, the merchant marine, Philippine independence, veterans' relief—the list of subjects for legislation and congressional oratory seems endless. And over all will be the shadow of the coming presidential election, with members of both parties and all factions playing for advantage in the eyes of a wearied and anxious public. Washington correspondents are already likening the coming session to a battle royal. Never in peace time will a new Congress have faced such grave responsibilities and such opportunities to legislate for the benefit of all the people.

MAN'S PRESTIGE GONE.

American women are again blamed for a nation's trouble, according to the Miami Herald. Lord Irwin has recently returned to England from India and has been telling what has caused the troubles of Great Britain in dealing with Asiatic possessions. He says the difficulties can be traced to the fact that "the prestige of the white man in India has been lost and probably can not be recovered."

The natives of India have no respect for a man, white or brown, who does not show that he is master of his wife, boss of his house and lord of his domicile. The East Indian forms his ideas of the Englishman by the moving pictures he sees. Most of these films are made in the United States, and to the simple Indian mind the Englishman and the American are identical. They are bossed by their women.

A Referendum Is Folly Unless Each Voter Is Pledged to Accept the Result

By ROBERT QUILLEN

IT is absurd to assume that majorities always are right.

But a majority that isn't right eventually ceases to be a majority; for time and experience prove all wrong hurtful, and a majority that is wrong surrenders control to a former minority that is right.

It is this fact alone that justifies government by the people. The common sense of the common man eventually recognizes the unprofitableness of wrong and discards it.

Majority rule, whatever its faults, is the only plan by which a semblance of equality and liberty can be preserved. Government of, by and for the people must be a government by the current majority. The moment men concede a minority's right to rule, that moment their liberty is doomed.

Right or wrong, the majority must rule until it ceases to be a majority. Reject that proposition and you destroy the foundation of freedom.

Yet men do reject it, frequently and violently. For all their lip service to fair play and sportsmanship, they accept majority rule only so long as it supports their individual prejudice. Majority rule is fair and right when they agree with the majority; it is unfair and wrong when they are on the other side.

Thus bad sportsmanship becomes the chief stumbling block of order and progress in a land governed by the people. The ordinary man is like a spoiled boy who breaks up the game because he can't have his own way. The rules are sacred only while he is winning.

If this republic is to survive as a land of freedom, people must learn that the fact of citizenship imposes an obligation to support the will of the majority.

The American Legion demands a referendum on the question of prohibition. What friend of freedom can oppose it?

If either side now constituted a clear majority, a referendum would be a waste and a folly. Since good and wise men of all opinions are confused by conflicting claims and unable to discover the majority will, only a referendum can reveal the desire that should rule.

At all costs and at all times, the people must preserve their right to require a ballot on every moot question.

But the only thing that justifies a referendum is doubt. And when that doubt is removed, and majority will revealed, let every citizen pledge himself to support the decision.

To require a referendum and then refuse to abide by the result of it would be no less treasonable in spirit than to reject an elected President and set up another to oppose him.

Damon Turns on Pythias.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The gossip that Al Smith and Franklin Roosevelt have severed their friendly relations seems to be borne out by Smith's sharp ciriticism of Roosevelt's reforestation plan.

It was Roosevelt who put Smith in nomination at Houston in 1928, with the "happy warrior" speech, and it was Smith who urged Roosevelt to accept the Democratic nomination for Governor of New York in the same year. Apparently, the two were as sympatico as Damon and Pythias until Roosevelt's presidential ambitions began to color his activities. Smith has studiously refrained from comment on Roosevelt's candidacy, but the way the wind was blowing was shown by the outspoken opposition to Roosevelt on the part of several of Smith's intimates.

Up to the present, Roosevelt has been far ahead of the field in the preconvention calculations, but many of his supporters are Democrats whose first allegiance is pledged to the 1928 standard bearer. If Smith chose to wage open battle with Roosevelt, the race for nomination would in all likelihood be a wide-open affair, with the possibility of a dark horse victory. Smith's opposition would be particularly potent if he chose to stay out of the running himself and fight Roosevelt from behind the scenes, as Bryan fought Champ Clark in 1912.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow has a chance—and a very good one—of becoming a senator from New Jersey. But she has a greater opportunity to correct a false notion by refusing the appointment if it is offered. A number of New Jersey women are urging their governor to appoint the widow of the great statesman to succeed him, and have placed the State executive in a difficult position.

Presumably Mrs. Morrow would be an abler legislator than most of the women now in the House of Representatives. But an unwholesome tendency has developed of choosing women for office on sentimental grounds, and if Mrs. Morrow persists in her refusal to consider the appointment she will do much to stay this unsound practice.

However able she might prove to be, Mrs. Morrow would be handicapped greatly at Washington as the successor of one of America's most brilliant and able statesmen, and she would be further embarrassed by being included in the ranks of women sent to Congress out of sentiment rather than merit.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Virginia Democrat Thinks Many Who Bolted in 1928 Will Return to Fold in 1932 Even if a Wet Is Nominated.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Beauchamp, of Dallas, Tex., has been good enough to contribute to The Post his advice and warning to the Democrats and to point out in detail what they should do and must not do in 1932 in order to bring him back into the Democratic fold from the bolters' band of 1928. No doubt the Methodist board of temperance and public morals, the "board of strategy" and such stalwart Democratic leaders as former Senators Simmons and Heflin will write Mr. Beauchamp a special letter of congratulations, and his own beloved former State Senator Love has doubtless already added his warm message of appreciation.

Mr. Beauchamp predicts ignominious defeat unless the Democratic leaders at the 1932 convention follow his advice and name a bone-dry candidate and write a dry platform. Since Mr. Beauchamp seems anxious to be taken back into the party which he bolted in 1928, and because of his absolute sureness of what are the wishes and convictions of "the great majority of Democrats of this country," it is suggested that he be invited to sit on the platform at the 1932 convention and to participate in all the deliberations then carried on. I am confident that the former statesmen who, like him, bolted the party in 1928, will lend him every assistance in carrying out the dictates of the Antisaloon League.

Whatever is done, Mr. Beauchamp should be assured that his vote will be welcomed by the Democratic party in 1932, and incidentally he should be advised that the religious question; the real reason for a great multitude of the voters bolting in 1928, in all probability will not be an issue in the next campaign. For this reason the bolting will not be nearly as prolific as it once was and many of the "dry Democrats" will be found supporting the standard bearer of their party regardless of whether he be dry or wet.

VIRGINIA DEMOCRAT.

Dry Organizations Rapped for Opposing Democrats' Debt-Lifting Drive.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The national prohibition board of strategy, having failed thus far to make any headway in its attempt to secure assurance that it will be permitted to write the 1932 platform of the Democratic party and to name its standard bearer, now comes out with a statement urging the defeat of that party's plan to erase its indebtedness and create a little surplus for the 1932 campaign.

These dry fanatical organizations have been shouting from the housetops for the last eight months about the "tainted" indebtedness of the Democratic party to Mr. Raskob and urging that such indebtedness be liquidated, but just as soon as such a plan was devised they come out and publicly condemn the project and brand it as wet propaganda.

It is my belief that all dry Democrats would rather give a dime to lift this indebtedness of its party than to contribute one penny to the discredited and fanatical dry organizations.

A VIRGINIAN.

Better Service Would Help Car Companies Compete With Taxicabs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The street railway companies seem to be making a great ado in regard to the zone taxicabs. If the two street railway companies would provide service commensurate with the fare charged, the zone taxicabs would not cripple their revenues to any appreciable extent.

It seems that the taxi owners should have sufficient intelligence to determine whether their operations are profitable or unprofitable. If they are making a fair profit, they should be allowed to continue. If their operations are unprofitable, they will eventually disappear without the necessity of any legislation.

Owing to the inadequate service of the street cars I have been using taxicabs, whereas if better street car service were provided, this would be reversed. In my opinion, the street car companies have only themselves to blame.

A STRANGE GENTLEMAN WRITES.

A gentleman I do not know,
Some thousand miles away,
So fond of me appears to be
He writes me every day;
And he wants to know if I'm the sort
Content through life to toil
Where I can make, if I'm a sport,
A fortune out of oil.

"Waste not a moment! Do it now!"
His strange epistle read,
"For if you wait, 'twill be too late,
I'll soon have all I need.
And you'll regret your lifetime through,
When fortunes I dispense
In just another month or two,
Your lack of common sense.

"Go beg and borrow all you can
And send it on to me!
Seven hundred times your shiny dimes
Returned to you will be.
My friend, my friend, do not delay!
Oh, be no longer blind,
Send me your money right away,
Rich oil we're soon to find!"

Such friendly letters thrill me through.
'Tis very nice to find
A stranger who is all for you,
So generous and so kind.
But still the dollars that I make
To him I do not send,
Because I do not wish to take Advantage of a friend.

FIRE-FIGHTERS SAVE 2 MOUNTAIN TOWNS.

North Carolina Groups Curb Forest Blaze in Battle Lasting All Night.

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 28 (U.P.).—Residents of two small mountain towns in Western North Carolina battled all night, and at noon today reported they had saved their homes and businesses from a forest fire which raged between.

Newland, county seat of Avery County, and Banner Elk, seat of Lees McRae College, where students joined in the all-night tussle with the flames, were protected by areas of fallen trees, cut down with axes and saws during the conflict.

The fire burned over an 18-mile area between the two towns and tonight the district was under heavy patrols of students and townsmen, to prevent further outbreaks in the parched, dry forest.

Other Reports Favorable.

Meanwhile from almost all directions from Raleigh came reports of varying success in the efforts of control fires in both mountain and coastal districts.

Fires burned in the Pocosin country, swampy coastal plains, extending roughly 150 miles from Sampson County to the Atlantic Ocean, over Jones, Onslow, Carteret, Craven, Columbus, Brunswick and New Hanover Counties, and in Avery and McDowell Counties in the western mountains.

Rain seemed likely to solve the problem in the mountains, but appeared unlikely for immediate relief along the coast. The fire areas were several hundred miles apart, across the entire State.

There was a bit of bad news from the area around Kinston, in Lenoir County, where it was reported flames had jumped natural obstructions which fighters had hoped would confine the conflagration.

Flames Leap River.

It was said that flames had leaped the White Oak River and Hunter's Creek and had crossed the Maysville-Stella highway in some places within 4 miles of Catfish Lake.

The fire there was sweeping over thousands of acres of grass and timber lands between Maysville and Comfort, in Jones County. These fires will burn unchecked for weeks unless rains bring early help, fire experts said.

The swampy, peat-like soil, which burns of itself in some places, provides fires which resist even all but the heaviest rains, and the country already is dryer than in many months.

Untold numbers of deer and smaller game have been destroyed in the holocaust, though no loss of life has been reported.

Civil War Told in Letters Of Reporters to Publisher

Library of Congress Purchases Amazing Story in 300 Epistles Written by Correspondents to Bennett, of New York Herald.

How the Civil War came to a New York publisher's desk is revealed in 300 longhand letters to James Gordon Bennett, just purchased by the Library of Congress.

They cover from 1861 to 1864 when Bennett was making journalistic history by maintaining an extra staff of 63 war correspondents at a four-year expense of $525,000.

In bitter complaints against censorship, reports of how scoops were got, and inside tips on political and army intrigues, the Civil War story is told.

"Terrible pressure on President growing out of my announcement of the program to keep Fremont where he is," wrote a Washington scribe in October, 1861. "Gen. Scott says he intends to compel me to tell where I got the information."

Amazing is an account by Malcolm Ives of how Gen. G. B. McClellan poured into his private ear the complete plans of his campaign which he had, the day previously, refused to President Lincoln and the Cabinet.

Of McClellan, Ives said: "He is as guileless and inndcent as a child, and we must be careful not to injure him even to promote Herald interests."

"One who wants his pay" protests: "What does the United States Government mean by keeping the Twelfth Regiment out of their pay?"

The Fredericksburg correspondent alibis his failure to report a visit from the President by saying his dispatch was seized as "contraband."

The Nashville reporter tells of going to the front under a flag of truce with a copper coffin, after a friend's body.

From Memphis came this: "A petition signed by the ladies (bless their feminine souls) was yesterday presented to Sherman imploring him to close the liquor shops."

From Vicksburg came complaints of malaria and from New Orleans the information that all the reporters were "hard up," the man from the World even "trying to borrow a shilling from every person he meets."

For the big news there was this: "At last I have the pleasure to announce the fall of Fort Hudson."

BROKER'S DEFENSE ENDS IN TAX TRIAL

G. G. Rice, Acting as Own Counsel, Makes Long Plea for Mercy.

New York, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—In a summation lasting three and a half hours, George Graham Rice, former stock promoter, pleaded with Federal jury today not to pile an additional term on the four years' sentence he is serving for mail fraud. He is on trial for alleged dodging on an income tax on $1,800,000 in 1925.

The case will go to the jury tomorrow after summatoin for the Government.

Rice, who has been his own counsel, because he said he had no money to hire lawyers, subjected the Government's evidence to close scrutiny and ridicule.

The 61-year-old man said the defense had presented no witnesses because it felt the Government had failed to establish a net income for 1925, or any income at all, either for himself or for the corporations he controlled.

The Government prosecutor was castigated for "unlawyerlike conduct," which Rice said consisted of making numerous claims in his opening statement "to prejudice the jury," and failing to touch on them in the evidence. Among these were claims that Rice had bought expensive automobiles and gave his wife a $58,000 emerald necklace.

The greater part of his summation was devoted to an attack on the books of the W. L. Jarvis & Co., Boston brokerage firm, which formed the basis for much of the Government's case.

"I am shocked that the court should stand for the introduction of this evidence," Rice shouted, "and it should be shocking to you. You wouldn't send a man to the penitentiary, would you, on airy persiflage of this kind?"

Stating that the indictment arose from "malicious reasons," Rice said: "This is a persecution not a prosecution."

COMMODITIES PRICE REDUCED IN SOVIET

Food and Clothing and Other Shop Offerings Are Cut by 30 Per Cent.

Moscow, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—On the eve of another hard winter, the Soviet citizenry drew a surprise dividend today on its investment in the five-year plan in the form of a 30 per cent average reduction in the prices of commodities sold in commercial shops.

With its slight industry developing rapidly and under the promise of better living conditions, the government decreed the price decrease to be effective November 1, just as feverish preparations were going forward for the observance of the fourteenth anniversary of the October revolution on November 7.

The action was the first concrete realization of the new policy under which government leaders are proclaiming confidence in the success of the five-year plan as a whole, and emphasized that it is now possible to inaugurate improved living standards by concentrating more on light industry, which produces goods for home consumption, without relaxing in the program for heavy industrial developments.

Those who will benefit chiefly by the new prices are the so-called "declassed" portions of the population. The move will offset to a great extent the 50 per cent average increase in prices last summer, which was taken as a deflating measure.

The commodities affected include food, clothing, tobacco, soap and footwear.

Shaw Lays Ballot Results to Fright

Britain Has Run Straight to Danger It Tried to Avoid, Is Remark.

London, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—"The country has been frightened out of its wits and has run away," George Bernard Shaw observed from behind his newspaper this morning, "straight into the very danger it was trying to avoid."

"It wasn't an election—it was a stampede," the noted playwright said. "The returns show it. I have no hope for the rest of the country. There isn't going to be any opposition. Of course, it won't make much difference because the real government is underground."

The government, he said, is going to be one of financial interests and the press. "The danger," he said, "lies in the political ignorance of these financial interests. They are clever in high finance, but hopeless duffers when it comes to genuine public finance."

Cruchaga to Pass On Mexican Claims

Ambassador Leaves U. S. for Meeting to Be Held in Mexico City.

(Associated Press.)

Ambassador Cruchaga, of Chile, left last night for Mexico City, where he will spend a month as neutral referee of the Spanish-Mexican and Italian-Mexican claims commissions.

The ambassador, who has headed the Mexican commissions since he was envoy here before, in 1926 and 1927, arranged the fall session and has planned another after the first of the year, with an object to concluding the work of those bodies during the first half ofk next year.

He was accompanied by Manuel Rivas Vicuna, of Chile, secretary general of the claims bodies, and Benjamin Cohen, personal secretary of the neutral referee. They will reach the Mexican capital Sunday, in time for the opening meeting on Monday.

The Spanish-Mexican Commission has more than a thousand claims to dispose of, the ambassador said, and the Italian-Mexican has to decide on about 200 claims.

This is Cruchaga's eighth trip to Mexico in connection with the claims work.

SIEGAL CALLS ROVER TO WITNESS STAND

Court Thronged as Prosecutor Is Called by Bribery Defendant.

A dramatic scene was enacted in the Criminal Court of the District Supreme Court when Abner Siegal, attorney, on trial on an indictment charging him with bribing a guard at the District Jail, abruptly directed United States Attorney Leo A. Rover, who is prosecuting him, to take the stand as a defense witness.

Through Rover, Seigal showed that he was indicted by the grand jury on April 2, which was five days before he was scheduled to appear before the United States Commissioner for a preliminary hearing. In several instances, Mr. Rover refused to answer questions concerning dates which are on official papers, the witness stating that these papers spoke for themselves.

Laughter Annoys Judge.

The witness was excused after he had interposed an objection to one of Seigal's questions. As he was leaving the stand Rover queried Seigal "Can I cross-examine myself?" Justice James M. Proctor looked up angrily as the spectators burst into laughter.

Probably not in months has a trial attracted such attention as the Seigal case. Spectators were roped off around the courthouse corridors, and 45 minutes before the afternoon session was to begin, several hundred persons were gathered in line.

The Government rested its case at noon and after Seigal had moved for a directed verdict, which was refused, defense witnesses began their testimony. The first line-up resembled police court as four witnesses from that place were called to tell of Seigal questioning them about courthouse records.

Seigal on Stand Today.

Police Court officers, who testified were Richard B. Gott, Clayton B. Sherwood, Charles Driscoll, and Deputy Marshal E. A. Sackey. United States Commissioner N. C. Turnage was also a witness, he having been subpoenaed to bring his records concerning Seigal's arrest and the postponement of a preliminary hearing.

Earlier in the day Seigal had waged a searching cross-examination of Dr. Wilmer Souder, Bureau of Standards handwriting expert, who identified two signatures as having been made by the same author. Seigal picked some flaws in the two signature, but he failed to shake Dr. Souder in his finding that the two were written by the same hand.

Three more defense witnesses are to appear today, and then rebuttal testimony by the Government and their examination will take up the remainder of the case. The high point in the case will be reached today when Seigal assumes the witness stand.

Abandoned Land Will Be Used in Reforestation

Battle Creek, Mich. (U.P.).—Farm land, abandoned as worn out, will be used in a reforestation experiment by Michigan State College experts.

W. K. Kellogg has given the college 360 acres of land in Kalamazoo County, which is considered "worked out" so far as grain crops are concerned. Paul A. Herbert, professor of forestry, will try evergreens on the land, devoting eight or nine years to the experiment.

10-POINT NATIONAL PROGRAM TO AID UNEMPLOYED BARED

enter into an appraisal of the facts and to make a definite effort to contribute to the general objective."

Normal Purchasing Needed.

But every effort to alleviate distress must fail as a step toward genuine economic rehabilitation, the committee declared, unless the great majority of the people snap out of their fretful attitudes and resume normal purchases.

"United national action to encourage every American citizen now employed to resume normal buying * * * is a condition precedent to any hopeful program to constructively increase employment," the report set forth. "Continued and further restriction of consumption of goods, and of expenditures for improvements and replacements, inevitably will offset any and every effort for emergency relief. The American people must be brought to realize that by restricting purchases to bare necessities at this time, they are further decreasing the volume of business and spreading the catastrophe they so attempt to divert. This is no theory but a cold fact, proof of which is written plainly in the economic record of the last two years."

Nor do these principles apply only to consumer purchases. They should be equally effective in the fields of finance, production and distribution, the report continues.

Workers' Expenditures.

"The manufacturer and the distributor who curtail operations in anticipation of decreased business, insures such a decrease. The capitalist and investor who practices unnecessarily rigid economy through fear of further loss of income, by his action contributes to decrease the value of his investments and the income derived therefrom. The worker who curtails expenditures to barest necessities for fear that his current employment may be only temporary, contributes definitely to the loss of his job. * * * It is the sober judgment of this committee that, as a fundamental to all of the aids hereafter suggested, the unifying of public interest and sentiment in this action is absolutely imperative."

The second great stimulating factor, the committee concluded from its two-month study, lies in the hands of the Nation's bankers. Ample resources are at hand to finance normal business; they need only to be rendered mobile in the usual channels of commerce. "Further and more certain fluidity of banking resources" is the key suggested by the committee to unlock this jam.

With hundreds of millions of idle funds in vaults throughout the country, scores of industrial establishments have been forced to forego contracts for want of ample credit; retail merchants have been held to hand-to-mouth buying; farmers with clear holdings can not finance diversification, stock feeding or sorely needed equipment replacements.

Reason of Banks' Hesitancy.

"In many of these cases it is not because the credit is undesirable that accommodations are denied, but because the paper is not rediscountable and banks hesitate to make loans of this character when no agency exists in which to rediscount them should heavy demands by their own depositors make such course necessary.

"The rediscount facilities of the Federal Reserve System are ample in the aggregate, but, unfortunately, paper of a character eligible for rediscount under the Federal Reserve act is not broadly scattered among the entire membership of the Federal Reserve System, and it is this fact that has given rise to the suggestion to broaden the eligibility clause of the act to admit for rediscount paper secured by bonds other than Government, on the theory that banks not holding eligible paper for rediscount could make available paper secured by certain types of bonds and thereby release for lending funds that could now be made available only through the sale, at sacrifice prices, of the securities suggested to be admitted.

"The need for added powers of rediscount are very real."

Credit Corporation Limits.

The participation of the banks in the National Credit Corporation is regarded by the committee as representing about the full measure of helpfulness from this source, yet the credit corporation does not reach those smaller producers and distributors whose combined activities constitute a controling influence in the national economy. Something more is needed, and the suggestion is thrown out—though it is not made directly—that the new fluidity should be achieved either through the Federal Reserve System or a second pool backed, perhaps, by the Government.

"It seems quite reasonable that if a pool were created to rediscount these secondary classes of paper the very existence of such a pool would justify local banks in reopening lines of credit."

In any event, some new credit machinery is needed, on a national scale, for "No matter how large the aggregate of banking resources, new credit can not be safely released so long as banks must hold themselves in readiness for sudden exigencies developing from a doubtful public."

Suspended Banks' Funds.

Moreover, considerable relief might be afforded through some new agency rendering liquid the resources of suspended banks. In many cases the forced sale under pressure of such securities has needlessly sacrificed sound assets of closed banks. A "substantial percentage" of more than a billion dollars thus frozen could be released within 30 days through a more comprehensive national credit system.

For the immediate present, however, the credit situation might be greatly improved by the mere act of individual bankers assuming a more liberal attitude toward their well-established patrons.

"In considering extension of credit lines bankers now might give due weight to intangibles, to broad conditions influencing credit reports and to the related interests of the country and the general public.

"Restrictions and requirements which ordinarily would be justified and would represent 'good banking practice' under the special conditions of today deserve broad and generous consideration.

Reaction of Loan Limitations.

"Extensions of existing loans * * * should be determined not alone upon the showing made by recent or current operating reports, but also after consideration of the broad underlying conditions, the average record of the enterprise over an extended term of years, the character of the borrower and the needs of the community.

"Imposition of strict limitation upon banking accommodations reacts with multiplied force through successive strata of industry."

The committee's recommendation that work be spread out thin among the whole normal force in each industry and establishment was merely an elaboration of its suggestion of September 28, but with the observation that employers in some lines have not responded. The suggestion is renewed with "an earnest appeal" that each manager apply it in his own immediate sphere.

Employers who dismiss trained workers merely for reasons of economy, without any previous attempt at internal adjustment, are characterized as "both selfish and inhuman."

Facilitating Public Works.

A spirited denunciation of "legal obstacles and supervisory red-tape" which delays public works contracts constituted the committee's sixth recommendation.

The seventh emphasized the value of even part-time employment for "the so-called 'w' te collar' group."

"As the period of idleness extends and winter approaches, their necessities have become, and will become, more pressing and destructive."

The eighth plank set out a selective basis for awarding employment on the basis of the individual's resources and community responsibilities.

"The responsibility to provide work for every willing, able citizen must carry with it the responsibility for seeing that available work is distributed with attention to the best interests of the Nation."

"Make Work" Program.

Such a policy, the committee concluded, "conforms with the growing belief that, under modern conditions, industry cannot reach its highest development except through the widest possible distribution of employment income and the widest possible spread of general prosperity."

The ninth point in the program suggested emergency application of the "make work" principle—that is, providing employment at tasks not urgently demanded. Says the report: "Wherever a community has conducted a careful canvass, great quantities of productive work has been listed, of industrial, civic and private origin. Local campaigns for modernization and repair of public and private facilities and structures have been invariably productive." This method has the advantage of "bringing home to the average citizen his part in the emergency." Moreover, is it a form of relief under which "human and spiritual factors may be conserved."

The last recommendation urges the placement of urban unemployed on nearby farms on a work-for-keep basis. It grows out of extensive findings that thousands of farmers have winter berths for such workers. But the local relief agencies must bring the job and the man together and, in many cases, provide transportation.

Economic Planning Board.

In presenting the committee's recommendation Chairman Gifford offered a challenge to all who during the last two years have so vigorously demanded an all-powerful economic planning board.

"There has been," he said, "a more or less insistent demand for the appointment of an economic council, or a representative group, to determine what could be done to improve conditions. The membership of the committee on employment plans and suggestions comprises such a representative group concerned with the immediate problem of unemployment relief. This group has set forth its views as to the measures which it believes will lessen distress from unemployment and hasten business recovery. Its recommendations should receive immediate and thoughtful consideration by all individuals and organizations, to the end that so far as possible and practicable they may be promptly translated into action."

The members of the committee are Harry A. Wheeler, W. Rufus Abbott, Edward N. Hurley and Alexander Legge, Chicago; Leonard P. Ayers and A. Johnson, Cleveland; T. H. Banfield, Portland, Oreg.; S. P. Bush and Fred C. Croxton, Columbus, Ohio; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio system; Homer L. Ferguson, Newport News shipbuilder; Wesley C. Mitchell, Matthew C. Sloan and William A. Starrett, New York; L. R. Smith, Milwaukee, and H. C. Knight, New Haven, Conn.

Relief Drives Over Top.

The committee's recommendations come at a time when basic industrial indexes have been lifting consistently for several weeks, and when last winter's high mark of some 6,000,000 unemployed has been reduced by upward of 1,500,000, according to the latest estimates of the Labor Department.

With it came reports from widely scattered cities indicating that the relief fund campaigns launched two months ago by Owen D. Young's subcommittee on mobilization of resources are generally oversubscribing their quotas. Seventeen city campaigns, scattered from Bellingham, Wash., to Corning, N. Y., reported total collections of $3,692,792 against a combined quota of $3,552,381. The combined national goal is approximately $170,000,000, of which total it is estimated that $120,000,000 already has been underwritten.

In charging Mr. Gifford with his task on August 17, President Hoover wrote:

"This care of misfortune is our first duty to the Nation. The whole force of the administration is at your disposal. Based upon my experience of some years in such problems I am sure we shall compass the task."

With that command, Gifford was given a free hand. He went to work two days later.

Capone Taking Up Reading as aPstime

Gang Chief Wearies of Solitaire and Asks for Jail Books.

Chicago, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Tired of playing solitaire, and with his friend and bodyguard, Philip D'Andrea, who today was released from jail for two weeks, Alphone Capone took up reading. From his county jail cell the gang chief said he'd like o have something to read. "Mystery stories, of you have any."

There are 37 sets of books that make the rounds in the jail, and the guard brought Capone a set which included "Toilers of the Sea," by Hugo; "The Wit and Humor of America," by Marshall; "Memoirs of a Physician," by Dumont, and "The Glory Hole," by White.

After looking them all over, Capone selected one and settled down to some steady reading. The guard didn't notice which one he picked.

BOARD TO DISCUSS COLUMN AIR HAZARD

Monuments on Columbia Island to Be Studied by Commission.

The erection of two monumenttal columns on Columbia Island, designed to frame the view from the city to Arlington and which has been severely criticized by local aviation authorities as constituting an extreme hazard to the maintenance of air commerce in and out of Washington Airport, will be discussed next Monday and Tuesday by members of the Commission on Fine Arts.

The objection to the construction of the 200-foot pillars within a few hundred yards of the airport has been so strenuous that it is believed that alternate proposals will be considered by the commission. Aviation experts, including the aviation committee of the Washington Board of Trade, have already strongly expressed the opinion that to erect the columns would greatly endanger incoming planes, especial ones piloted by visiting fliers.

Other projects which will have the attention of the commission are: Designs for the memorial gates to be erected at Annapolis, designs for the George Washington Bicentennial 25-cent piece, designs for the proposed addition to the National Museum, and for the proposed P street bridge, and sketches for a rest house to be built at Wakefield.

There will also be a joint meeting of the committee for the Fine Arts Exhibition of the George Washington Bicentennial and the Commission of Fine Arts.

EXTRA POSTOFFICE WORK AIDS JOBLESS

$5,132,123 to Be Spent for Additional Employes During Christmas.

The sum of $5,132,123 will be spent for temporary relief of unemployment by the Postoffice Department in hiring additional employes to handle the Christmas rush this year, it was announced yesterday.

Last year the department gave employment to 171,000 men and women during the Christmas season. It is not expected that quite as many will be engaged this year because of present economic conditions.

This part-time employment will start December 13, but will reach its peak between December 17 and December 24. There will, as usual, be no mail deliveries on Christmas Day.

Of the total made available for additional Christmas labor, $96,732 will be spent in Washington, where about 2,000 additional workers probably will be hired. Applications will be received until December 5.

It is the purpose of the Postoffice Department to make these spare-time jobs available wherever possible to unemployed men and women, and postmasters throughout the country accordingly have been advised that "the most thorough inquiry must be made to verify statements submitted by applicants as to their need of employment and their fitness for work in handling the mails."

Emphasis is laid upon the need for early mailing, and large advertisers are being requested to withhold heavy mailings of matter such as catalogues and calendars between December 10 and January 1, although this does not apply, it is pointed out, to current advertising pertaining to holiday sales.

WOMAN IS ARRESTED AS FALSE U.S. AGENT

Atlanta Cafe Owner's Wife Charges Arrest Is Retaliation.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Charged with falsely representing herself as a special agent of the immigration service, a woman known as Mrs. Laura Mitchell, of Atlanta, was arrested here today at the request of Federal authorities in New York.

She was released by United States Commissioner E. S. Griffiths under $2,000 bond posted by P. N. Mitchell, Atlanta cafe operator, who said he is her husband.

Information telegraphed here by United States District Attorney George Medalie, of New York, was made the basis of the warrant. Medalie's telegram said she falsely represented herself as a special agent of the immigration service and in that capacity made a search of the steamship Edison, of the Green Line, last August 13, and threatened the arrest of the captain of the boat, charging him with bringing stowaways into the United States.

It was also charged she presented false, forged and fictitious credentials to Christopher Zaphyriades, general passenger agent of the Green Line, which purported to have been signed by Assistant Secretary of Labor Carsson.

Mrs. Mitchell, who gave a fashionable address, refused consent for her removal to New York. She told newspaper reporters the charge apparently was "in retaliation" for information she said she hadgiven to Government authorities in Washington regarding entry of aliens into this country. She said she did go to the captain of the Edison and protest what she charged was the activity of the ship in bringing in aliens illegally, but denied she posed as a Government agent. She claimed she made a trip from Greece to New York on the Edison, and charged the ship brought in aliens as "seamen."

M'COOEY EXPLAINS DEAL ON JUSTICES

Democratic Boss Says G. O. P. Leader Inspired Leader of Bipartisan Slate.

New York, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Smiling and suave, John H. McCooey, Brooklyn's Democratic boss, took full responsibility today before the Hofstadter legislative committee for a "deal" whereby Democrats and Republicans pooled their support and picked a bipartisan slate to fill twelve new judgeships.

He told in detail how Meyer Steinbrink, once Republican leader of Brooklyn, first suggested the deal at a banquet in 1930, when he drew his chair close to McCooey's and whispered:

"We ought to get together."

Steinbrink, who received one of the five nominations allotted to the Republicans, admitted the statement when he took the stand, but denied he had been a party to the arrangement.

Frederick J. H. Kracker, present Brooklyn Republican leader, took several hours to tell his part in the bargaining.

State G. O. P. Chairman Testifies.

W. Kinsland Macy, chairman of the Republican State committee, testified he was aware of the arrangement, but denied with vehemence having had anything to do with its conception or with engineering it.

"It just grew along," he said. "There was no opposition."

"But there had to be an iniating cause," said Samuel Seabury, committee counsel.

"I wasn't it," Macy replied.

Seabury expressed interest in how McCooey's 31-year-old son, John H., jr., was picked as one of the seven Democratic candidates.

"I was glad to name my son because the party leaders all had urged me to do so and because the boy is generally considered capable and efficient and has practiced law for ten years," testified the short, pudgy, Democratic chief, as he twisted his white, walrus-like mustaches.

Son Unanimously Urged.

He said he had been "surprised" at the unanimity among the Democratic leaders in favor of his son's nomination. When questioned about the indorsement of his son by the Brooklyn Bar Association, he denied he solicited any of the letters received from prominent lawyers and judges belonging to that body.

"Jack did that himself," he said.

"Do you think the letters were a tribute to you or to Jack?" Mr. Seabury asked.

"I hope it was to Jack, because I don't need it," Mr. McCooey replied.

He said when his son was hesitant about accepting the nomination he told him:

"Well, we can nominate you as well as anyone else. There's no objection to youth and vigor, and you have both."

HENRY FORD TO CUT WAGES OF WORKERS

"Prosperity Dollar" Increase Granted Year Ago to Be Rescinded.

(Copyright, 1931.)

Detroit, Oct. 28 (U.P.).—Henry Ford is slashing off part of the "prosperity dollar" wage increases granted his employes during boom times, the United Press was informed today at the Ford Motor Co.

While not definitely announced yet, the minimum pay for Ford workers probably will be reduced from $7 a day to $6, the old rate in effect prior to 1929. Higher-paid employes will suffer reduction in proportion, or greater.

Ford announced his $7 a day minimum wage more than a year ago, after a conference with President Hoover in Washington. In effect, he meant to pass to the workers some of the profits accumulated over the unusual years of 1928-29, it was said, with the idea also of stimulating business generally.

After continuing wages based on what Ford considers the "inflated dollar" of the last few years, the time has come to return to a "more normal" basis, it was said.

The company feels that it has maintained the high wages longer than other large companies, and at the same time employed more men than others in the automotive industry.

Whether the reduced wages, along with reduced prices of other materials, will be reflected in price of the new model Ford, which is expected to be announced by January 1, was not discussed, but the Ford policy always has been to pass on such reductions to purchasers.

Departmental heads are handling the rate reductions. A "seniority scale" of increase has been in effect in Ford plants, whereby employes engaged for a number of years have received increases periodically.

Prosecution Says Apartment Was Rented for Murder.

Detroit, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Selection of a jury to try three gangsters for slaying one of a trio of rival hoodlums shot down in an apartment house on September 16 was started today in recorder's court.

MARINES' AIR CHIEF DEAD FROM INJURY

Col. Thomas C. Turner Dies in Haiti; Was Struck by Propeller.

(Associated Press.)

Naval radio informed Marine Corps fliers here yesterday that their chief is dead.

Col. Thomas C. Turner succumbed at a field hospital in Port Au Prince, Haiti, to injuries caused Monday by a whirling airplane propeller. He flew the ship down from Washington to Haiti, landed at Gonaives and got stuck in the mud. Going around to see how the ship could be freed, he slipped in the slush and the flying blade gashed his head.

A naval tug made a vain race to take him to a hospital. The injuries were beyond repair and he died yesterday afternoon.

Turner was born in 1882 at Mare Island, Calif., where his mother, Mrs. Mary Turner, still lives. He had made his home in Washington for years, and left a widow, Mrs. Ethel Turner. He enlisted in the Marines in 1901 and won a lieutenancy the next year.

By 1916 he was a major and the next year was an aviator. He was attached to the Army then, commanding the flying field at Ellington, Tex., until after the war when he was sent back to his own branch.

Then he went to Haiti, winning the military medal of that country for repulsing with "remarkable valor" an attack of insurgents against the capital. In 1920 he was appointed officer in charge of Marine Corps aviation. Next year he won the distinguished flying cross for commanding an extended flight to Santo Domingo, the longest unguarded land plane flight over water at that time.

During the succeeding years he served at various domestic Marine stations. He commanded the aircraft squadrons of the corps in China and in 1929 was appointed for the second time chief of Marine aviation. He was on this assignment when he decided to take to Haiti the big amphibian plane which caused his death.

Sheriff Culbertson was told that the shooting was the culmination of a drinking party at Tipton's home to which Ashworth had been a visitor two or three times early in the evening.

GRAND JURY INDICTS SIXTY IN VIRGINIA

48 True Bills Are Returned by Harrisonburg Panel in Two-Day Session.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—orty-eight indictments, involving 60 persons, were returned by the grand jury for the United States District Court for the western district of Virginia, which closed a two-day session here last night.

John Andrwe Brown, vice president and cashier of the People's National Bank of Martinsville, who pleaded guilty to four counts in an indictment for embezzlement of $55,514 of the bank's funds, was due to begin today serving a five-year sentence in the Atlanta Federal penitentiary.

James R. Bondurant, a teller in the bank, was indicted on a charge of embezzling $9,000. His trial was removed to the Danville term of court.

The four counts to which Brown pleaded guilty charged embezzlement of $2,500 on August 25, 1930; of $3,000 on February 16, 1931; of $5,600 on February 4, 1931, and of $44,414.71 between January 1, 1929, and September 19, 1931.

Bank examiners reported that Brown forged notes on the customers of the bank to cover up his shortages.

He was sentenced by Judge Henry C. McDowell.

The criminal docket of the Federal Court term was concluded yesterday after Judge McDowell had fined and sentenced fifteen additional prohibition law violators.

BLOODHOUND CASE KILLED BY JUDGE

Sets Aside Term Against Oak Grove Bachelor on Assault Charge.

Montross, Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—In an opinion setting aside a three years' imprisonment sentence against Henry Taylor, of Oak Grove, on a charge of assaulting a young married woman, it is held by Judge E. Hugh Smith, of Westmoreland County Circuit Court, that the actions of bloodhounds is valueless as evidence.

The court held that the case should never have gone to a jury. The decision ended the second jury trial of the elderly Oak Grove bachelor. The case was tried over a prolonged period, with Judge Smith becoming ill at once time, necessitating the impaneling of a new jury.

The motion to set aside the verdict was argued by W. W. Butzner, of Frederick, and George Mason, of Colonial Beach. The attorneys contended that the dogs used in trailing the woman's assailant were not permitted to follow their instincts but were hampered by the guidance of their owner. It was argued at times during the attempts of the hounds to trail the person that attacked the woman the hounds were pulled off the trail they seemed to be naturally following.

The case is said to be without precedent in Virginia courts and so far as is known there has been only one other of its kind, that being heard by the South Carolina Supreme Court, which sustained a contention similar to the one involved in the Virginia case.

Taylor was arrested after bloodhounds had run to hishome. He was arrested and charged with the assault on the woman; mother of four children, on April 8 near Oak Grove.

Turkey-Fete Host Begin Jails Term

Hunter, Out of Season, Surrenders in Virginia After Banquet.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—William Spitler, who last Sunday dispensed hospitality in the form of two large roasted wild turkeys, with trimmings, at a dinner party for friends at his home in the mountains west of here, changed to less succulent bill of fare today when he surrendered at the county jail, after learning that officers had started to his home to take him into custody.

Spitler had been arrested, convicted and fined $10 and costs for killing the turkeys out of season, and a similar fine and a 30-day jail sentence for hunting without a license.

He explained to the court that he killed the turkeys by mistake when he heard something moving in the bushes and thought it was a groundhog. He was allowed 48 hours to gather some crops and after he had absented himself for more than 70 hours, game wardens and deputy sheriffs started for his home, but he reached jail ahead of them and surrendered.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 27 (A.P.).—A writ of error was granted by the Supreme Court of Appeals today to the Virginia Electric & Power Co., which complained of a judgment of the law and equity court, past 2, of Richmond, against it and in favor of E. O. Lenz for $1,200.

Virginia Woolen Plant Starts Eight-Hour Day

Winchester, Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Employes of the Virginia Woolen Co., one of the South's largest worsted mills, today began an eight-hour day work schedule, following a decision of the management to curtail the working day by two hours.

All employes will be affected, it was said, including weavers. The latter are the only class of employes on a piece-work basis, but with the schedule cut to eight hours they will not be able to turn out as much work. The change was made, it was explained, in the hope of spreading the work over a greater length of time to permit employment of a larger force.

LUTHERAN PASTOR NAMED TO NEW POST

The Rev. Richard Schmidt Gets Berth in Philadlphia Diocese.

The Rev. Richard Schmidt, D. D., of Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church, has been elected pastor of St. John's German Lutheran Church in Philadelphia. He expects to leave Washington before the end of the year. The congregation will hold a special meeting Wednesday, November 4, to consider his resignation.

Dr. Schmidt assumed the pastorate of Zion Church June 1, 1912. He came to America from Germany when he was 14 years old, and was ordained five years later. Before coming to Washington he served German Lutheran congregations in Hagerstown, Md., Beadstown, Ill., Baltimore, Md., and Syracuse, N. Y.

His double language service is Dr. Schmidt's chief distinction. During the war he was the only minister in Washington to continue German services.

For a year before the gray granite Zion Church at Sixth and P streets was sold, Dr. Schmidt served a divided congregation, a branch having been organized in Petworth. A year ago, the old church was sold to a colored congregation. All services are now held in the temporary chapel at New Hampshire avenue and Buchanan street.

St. John's is one of the oldest and most prominent churches in Philadelphia. It stands at the corner of Fifteenth and Ogden streets. Its former pastor, Dr. Adolph Spaeth, was also a professor at the theological seminary at Mount Airy.

Dr. Schmidt's family will follow him to Philadelphia about the first of February.

from the foreign borrowers the means for payment of such loans.

"It is obvious that one reason why the other nations of the earth have been building up fresh tariff walls is the conviction that, if so great a country as the United States of America feels it essential to erect increasingly high tariffs, then all the more is it necessary for these lesser and weaker nations to follow our noble example."

A "well-considered move" for world tariff reduction would be too much to hope for, Lamont admitted. However, he expressed conviction that the American people, who, he said, welcomed President Hoover's debt holiday plan, also would welcome with "equal good sense and determination," some form of tariff modification.

"There would be no difficulty," Lamont said, "in avoiding wild and indiscriminate tariff slashes.

"Certainly ways could be found, with all due regard for our industries which long ago graduated from the infant class, to reduce materially the height of our tariff barriers and at the same time, through encouraging greater imports in certain schedules, to increase substantially our customs revenues."

Lamont warned against the assumption by other nations that because of the President's one-year moratorium plan, America is called on perforce to make the next move in the matter of international indebtedness.

"President Hoover," Lamont concluded, "has made a great and helpful gesture. The world will not soon forget his constructive measures. It now becomes the prime business of European governments to undertake to settle the question of reparations and that without American initiative."

INTO PLOUGHSHARES

IN two tall steel towers, long a landmark on Virginia Avenue, there was manufactured during the war the famous TNT, mightiest agent of destruction.

Now again the same towers are in use, this time for gas, agent of peace and modern comfort.

Engineers of this Company have found a way to wash gas, using the equipment in the towers. The washing process removes from the gas a substance called napthalene which, if left in, would eventually clog your gas pipes just as rust clogs water pipes, and so cause expense and inconvenience.

Since this added service to users was put in force here, Washington gas is among the cleanest and most efficient available anywhere in the nation—it is more than ever the ideal modern fuel.

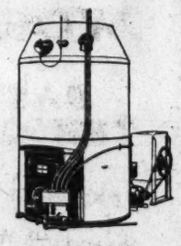
MW BOILER

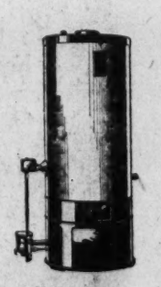
for Steam or Hot Water Heat

(manufactured by MOTOR WHEEL CORPORATION, Heater Division, Lansing, Michigan)



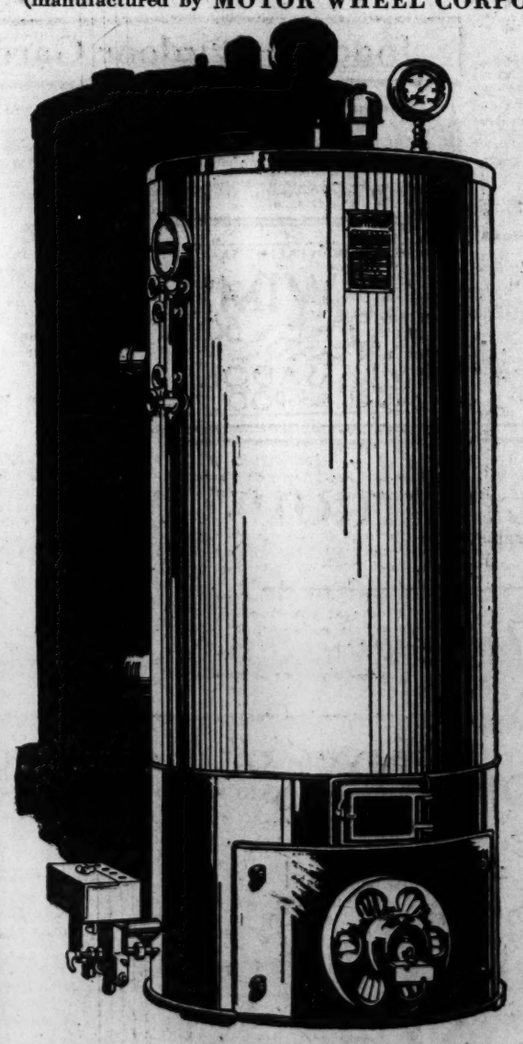
MW "Weather Control"

is an oil-burning warm air heating plant that heats your house in winter with forced, humidified air and cools it in summer with fresh, constant circulation, quietly, automatically, economically. A complete matched unit that gives you an amazing heating efficiency hitherto unknown.



All the Hot Water you want at amazingly Low Cost!

This MW Oil-Burning Water Heater gives you an inexhaustible supply of hot water at a cost of one cent for fifteen to twenty gallons, which means a saving of from 50% to 75%. And, this MW Oil-Burning Water Heater is automatic and noiseless—with not a single moving part. Listed as Standard by the Underwriters' Laboratories.



Manufactured, sold and installed on an undivided responsibility basis, the MW Steam or Hot Water Boiler assures complete satisfaction.

You can't confuse the MW Matched Unit Oil-Burning Boiler with any other heating unit you ever saw. Here's an automatic, thermostatically-controlled, quiet oil-burner actually designed into a boiler. The combustion chamber, flues and burner are matched—not merely assembled for sales convenience.

The MW Oil-Burner employs a natural principle of burning oil quietly with not one moving or wearing part in the burner. But MW engineers were not content with this development. They insisted upon designing and building every part in the assembly in relation to its functioning with every other part. Result—the MW "Matched Unit"—burner designed for its own boiler—boiler designed for its own burner.

Because of its efficient design it has established new records for heating efficiency and low operating costs; in addition it has that durability which means long life. It is listed as Standard by the Underwriters' Laboratories.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE American listening public, which used to accept the overdose of radio advertising with the philosophical comment, "Anyway, I do not have to either pay for or listen to it," finding the tendency to overcommercialize increasing over the past few months, is on the verge of an open revolt against this practice. More often than not today when the man in the street is asked if he heard a certain program the reply is, "My set is not tuned on as much as it used to be. There is too much advertising," or "I can not enjoy the program because of the excessive advertising; therefore I do not listen to it."

The broadcasting industry has long been cognizant of this state of affairs and, in all fairness, it should be pointed out that a portion of blame is upon the advertisers, who are determined to get their money's worth out of the time they pay for.

At the meeting of the National Association of Broadcasters this past week the very first item of warning in an address prepared by Gen. Charles McK. Saltzman, chairman of the Federal Radio Commission, was:

"Broadcasters, if they are wise, will correct complaints, now quite prevalent, concerning sales talks over their stations, and otherwise improve their programs."

Thus Gen. Saltzman pointed out to the industry its responsibility in remedying this state of affairs. The commercial sponsor should not be allowed by the broadcasters to determine the station policy in this matter.

SEVERAL commercial sponsors throughout the country have already seen the light and are now holding down their sales talk to a minimum. Prominent among these are two network programs which previously had as much sales talk as the other programs' listeners are now objecting to—the Jack Frost Melody Moments and the General Electric Twilight Hour. In both these cases the sponsors declared they were guided by public opinion in abandoning attempts to sell their products during this period, being content with a slight mention only.

In elaborating his warning Gen. Saltzman said:

"Just as improvements are made in technical operation with better signals laid down in the service area, just so must program improvements be made with better entertainment laid down in the homes of the listening public. * * * Broadcasters, if they listen to the trend of public opinion, will commence to take steps to make these sales talks more palatable. Right now the problem is theirs and they should hasten to solve it."

IN seeking a closer coordination between the manufacturers and the broadcasters Bond F. Geddes, of the Radio Manufacturers' Association, did not omit calling attention to the great harm overcommercialism might do both industries when he addressed the National Association of Broadcasters.

"We all stand or fall on our service to the public," he pointed out. "And the public taste changes. Times and habits change. There undoubtedly has developed less tolerance and rising criticism of the advertising excesses of some sponsors. Self-regulation, self-censorship, which can be made most effectual through your organized body, appears as the solution."

With these and other warnings from speakers as guiding lights, it is believed that one of the fruits of the meeting of the National Association of Broadcasters this year will be a lessening of the tendency to overcommercialize. Surely the owners of broadcasting stations all over the country left the Detroit meeting determined to make a great effort to please the listener in this matter.

B. A. Rolfe, director for the past three years of the Lucky Strike Orchestra, will lay aside his baton to go abroad for an extended vacation. Rolfe will play his final dance program this Saturday, and will sail for Europe shortly thereafter. When his band completes its signature number on Saturday, it will have played 668 broadcasts without a break. It is estimated he has played 7,480 dance tunes.

An entirely new type of program will be given next Tuesday, when the three weekly periods will feature different dance orchestras, opening with Gus Arnheim's Coconut Grove Orchestra. On Thursday Wayne King and his orchestra will be heard. On Saturday, Andy Sannella and his orchestra will occupy the hour. These three orchestras will alternate for four weeks, following which another group of three orchestras will be heard for a like period.

Arrangements are also being made to pick up on short waves European and English dance orchestras and rebroadcast them over these periods. Weber and Fields will continue to appear.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY will meet Harvard in the first international collegiate radio debate. The universities were invited to meet in the transatlantic broadcast debate by the N. B. C. Short-wave transmission will carry voices across the Atlantic for rebroadcast here. N. B. C. has invited the British Broadcasting Corporation to rebroadcast the debate on the other side. Robert B. Eckles, president of Harvard University debating council, has started negotiations with Oxford to arrange subject and set date. The first week in December is provisional. It is planned to have the debate last one hour.

News notes from WOL include the information that the premiere of John Barrymore's "The Mad Genius" will be described from the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow night. Each Tuesday and Friday Browning & Baines will sponsor the Boswell Sisters, an electrical transcription, over WOL at 10:15 a. m.

EUGENE ORMANDY, who is to conduct a Philadelphia Orchestra series shortly in the absence of Toscanini, has prepared a concert including such interesting contrasts as a special symphonic arrangement of current song hits and Tschaikowsky's "Sleeping Beauty Waltz" for his program tonight (WMAL, 9 o'clock).

Sybil Don, who has been playing successfully with the Northern Dramatic Company, is Miss Sylvia Donevich, who starred in character leads with the Eastern High School Players. Miss Donevich can be heard in the third and concluding act of "Caste," along with B. Stanley Simmons, jr., tomorrow night (WOL, 7:30 o'clock).

A program for Old Dixie—a salute to the "Land of Cotton"—will be broadcast by the RKO Theater of the Air direct from a dinner of the Southern Society of New York tomorrow night (WRC, 10:30 o'clock). Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, will speak briefly.

THEY are getting it down finer and finer. When President Hoover at the White House in Washington addressed the National Association of Broadcasters in Detroit, radio listeners not only heard the President's address, but also the applause which followed his speech by those attending the convention at Detroit.

The broadcasters applauded President Hoover's voice as it came from the loud speaker just as they would have applauded the President had he spoken to them in person.

Later, when James W. Baldwin, secretary of the Radio Commission, read the speech Chairman Charles McK. Saltzman had intended making, their applause was also heard.

Baldwin, however, was a little out of luck. If it had been in the old days and in the eleventh hour he had been called upon to read the speeceh of the boss, he would have had a fine joyride to Detroit on expense account along with the rest of the boys.

But being on the Radio Commission, the chains immediately offered Baldwin wire facilities, and he had to read the address from Washington instead of allowing him a trip to Detroit.

Dare Interprets the Mode

New York, Oct. 24.

WHAT one thing, my deahs, has been the outstanding characteristic of the smart woman's daytime and evening bag for o-o-o-h ages? We've had little ones and big ones, leather ones and cloth ones, rhinestone ones and lame (lah-may) ones—but they've all been the envelope, or underarm, or back-strap type! And this, in spite of the fact that there are, and always have been women who like bags with a handle! Bags with handles have been rather dowdy, because nobody paid much attention to beautifying and smartening them up to current style standards.

But today the handled bag has arrived, first in antelope early in the season, then in calf and pin seal for autumn tailleurs, later in velvets and for the latest dressy autumn afternoon wear. And finally, my deahs, one bright manufacturer discovered the perfect handle—one of links of prystal that's practically unbreakable and extremely decorative. Leather or fabric handles looked all right, but they did wear out very quickly, now, didn't they? And metal link handles seemed just the thing until one carried a bag with a metal handle on an icy day, and had the great discomfort of having electric shocks tingle the fingers unpleasantly! But here's prystal, and the handle problem has come to a happy solution.

Handles are'nt the only notable feature of evening bags, though. I saw a perfectly stunning evening pouch of black seed pearls the other day, with a border design and swanky monogram of rhinestones, which was the last word in sophistication, not to mention beauty!

* * * *

What would you do if you were a very, very elegant lady, and had brought at least—oh, 35 hats with you from Paris, 'n' then something or other kept you from returning to Paris for much longer than you expected—and Dame Fashion decided to completely change your head covering.

Well, that's what happened to me—and there simply was nothing else to do but to rip all my 35 hats apart, shake 'em all up in a hat box so that they were thoroughly scrambled and then make all new hats out of the scrambled remains.

'N' that's what I did, and there are some of the new hats that evolved sketched for you today. At the upper left is a black soleil with a high aquarish sort of a crown (very new, you know), with a ribbon cut right out of the soleil and perched at the side back. At the upper right is a darling, and I made it in several different colors, all from old hats, remember—and it ties on to the head with a matching velvet ribbon.

Matching velvet ribbon again trims this square-crowned hat in the center, and the one below is made of black velvet, very supple, and trimmed with uncurled ostrich in a looped chou. How's that for a sartorial life-saver?

* * * *

Do you know, my deahs, that your entire wardrobe problem may be solved economically and very, very smartly, if you hurry and send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Post for this week's illustration leaflet? Because, you see, taking one skirt of infinite chic and becomingness, and cuts, there are at least fifteen possible through wise combination. And these costumes cover every event in the smart and busy woman's life from early morning to early morning! And they do it with Paris' authentic stamp of chic, too! Better rush that envelope.

Au revoir!

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE tell me how to care for a pandanus. The leaves of mine are beginning to turn brown on the edges. MISS RUTH D. H.

The pandanus requires a warm, sunny place in winter and a place near an open window or in a semi-sunny porch in summer. It should be watered whenever you see that the surface soil in the pot is dry. When watering it, give enough to moisten all the soil in the pot. Spray the foliage once each week. With such care it should do well.

Will a lemon verbena do well in a window box? HERMINE L.

Yes, if the box is in the sun and is well watered every day.

Will geraniums be likely to grow well in an eastern window? ARCHIE G. E.

Yes. Water these plants only every other day and give them plenty of fresh air.

I have a large-flowered hydrangea bush which at present is covered with dried flowers. When should these be removed and the shrub pruned? AN INEXPERIENCED GARDENER.

The hard-wooded shrub variety of hydrangea should be pruned in the late fall. The reason we do this work in the fall is because the plant blooms on wood made the same season.

Please tell me why buds on calla lilies fail to open. MARY G. T.

There may be several causes. All callas demand a great deal of moisture and a rather high temperature (68 to 70 degrees Fahrenheit). You must give them water every day. They also demand a rich soil and a great deal of sunshine. They never do well in a dark place. Try giving them liquid manure when the next buds appear.

Would maiden-hair fern do well in a window box facing the north? It is in dense shade most of the time. EMILY L.

The maiden-hair fern has too delicate a constitution for window-box use. Better fill the box with low-growing holly ferns or some of the strong-growing pteris varieties.

Why does a small Mexican rubber plant persist in dropping its leaves? I water it daily and keep it in the sun. JOHNSON G. D.

It is a case of too much water. The crassula should be watered only about once a week.

Will it injure a rubber plant to transplant it at this time? I know the plant is potbound. MRS. JERRY B.

No, you may transplant a rubber plant at any season.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

More Help for Jerry.

DEAR Frances McDonald: I have read the "complaint" of Jerry in your column and I would like to give my views from a woman's standpoint, and I am going to talk directly to "Jerry" in the following paragraphs:

You confess, you maried a woman you knew only two weeks. You were sure you loved her, you didn't want to hear anything about her, nothing else mattered but that you wanted her for your wife, your ideal. And in due course, she gave you a son and the day of his birth was "the happiest day of your life." All this you admit!

Now after 16 months, you discover that years ago it was possible for her to err. You have discovered that she has kept a secret—a secret that was hard to tell because of the love that you seemed to have for her, a love that did lift her burden some because she had never had such love. You do not think of her feelings in the matter, only your own vanity that has been hurt. You are willing to add to the already too heavy burden of sorrow she has been carrying and break up that home that was so happy. You are willing to throw even your own son out into the world without a father's care and guidance, perhaps to be farmed out here or there while the mother, heavy hearted, works to earn perhaps a meager living for the two children—yours and the other. However, the two children are equally dear to her. She brought them into the world. They are both hers. You say you are 40 while your wife is 21. Stop and think! Did you come to her pure and undefiled? No, perhaps not; but you are a man, the world expects such things, and no evidence of unchastity has followed you. You married for better or worse. Who would sacrifice and help you if you became ill or in trouble with all her heart and soul—only your wife. This same woman that you are willing to discard as an old shoe!

So why not take the course that will build up rather than tear down. Ease the already too heavily-laden mind of the mother of your child by arranging to adopt her little girl. No one need know she is your wife's child unless you tell them, so you would not be the "laughing stock" of your community. You would be building up four lives instead of destroying them, and would be acting the part of a noble character. After all, what is it that hurts you? Is it not only your vanity?

Don't let petty vanity make you a martyr. Be the real man—the man who is so wrapped up in the love of his wife and home that he is willing to share it with one that his wife loves as a mother should. She has had no easy time "keeping the secret."

A MOTHER.

CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

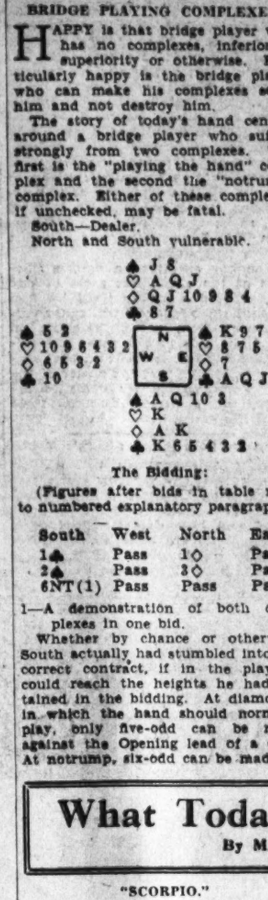
BRIDGE PLAYING COMPLEXES.

HAPPY is that bridge player who has no complexes, inferiority, superiority or otherwise. Particularly happy is the bridge player who can make his complexes serve him and not destroy him.

The story of today's hand centers around a bridge player who suffers strongly from two complexes. The first is the "playing the hand" complex and the second the "notrump" complex. Either of these complexes, if unchecked, may be fatal.

South—Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The Bidding:

(Figures after bids in table refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	1◇	Pass
2♠	Pass	3◇	Pass
6NT(1)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A demonstration of both complexes in one bid.

Whether by chance or otherwise, South actually had stumbled into the correct contract, if in the play he could reach the heights he had attained in the bidding. At diamonds, in which the hand should normally play, only five-odd can be made against the Opening lead of a club. At notrump, six-odd can be made by proper play. However, the holder of this hand failed to visualize its possibilities when the Dummy went down after West had opened a heart. Seeing only that he must somehow rid himself of the Ace and King of diamonds, South carelessly played the Knave of hearts from the Dummy and was, of course, compelled to overtake with the King in his own hand. This spelled his doom. Realizing his error almost as soon as he had made it, he sought to correct it by a very obvious trap for a weak opponent. Realizing now that he could unblock the diamonds by discarding the Ace and King on the high cards in the Dummy he led the Queen of spades hoping that a kindly adversary would win with the King and either that the club suit would not be led or that if East won the spade trick, that he also held the Ace of clubs and would not lay it down against the Slam contract. East, as it happened, did hold the King of spades, but while he knew that by taking this trick he could set the contract at least 1 trick, he was playing for bigger game. South's Queen of spades held the trick and his transparent ruse was defeated. Now he laid down the Ace and King of diamonds as further concealment in this respect could do him no good. His next lead was the small spade and this trick East won with the King and returned the suit, as he now had South's spade holding counted. South now could do nothing but lead a club. West played the Ten, but East overtook with the Knave to lead the fourth round of spades. This trick South won with the Ace and was compelled to lead a second round of clubs. East again won, cashed his good spade and followed with the Ace of clubs, thereby making three spades and three clubs and defeating the contract 5 tricks, a high penalty for wreckless bidding and inexcusable play.

While South should never have undertaken a contract of six notrump, actually the making of this contract was not an unusual problem in unblocking. The Ace of hearts should have won the first trick and upon the Queen and Knave of hearts South must discard the Ace and King of diamonds. Six rounds of diamonds should then follow and East would have great difficulty in choosing his discards. He must discard from both the club and spade suits as his hand was void of hearts in the first three leads. If East parted with three clubs and two spades, South discarding after him would throw three clubs and the Queen, Ten, and Trey of spades and then by leading a club could have made his contract. If East, on the other hand, discarded three spades and two clubs, South would have discarded five clubs and one spade, and would then by leading a spade from the Dummy make his Small Slam.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Question: What are the objects of scientific bidding?

Answer: 1st. Penalties. The greatest gains are made by setting opponents. Caution—beware lest you get yourself trapped!

2nd. Premiums at own bid. For this object Slams may be bid when vulnerable with slightly less strength than when not vulnerable—a gambling chance.

3rd. Defense—"Nothing, not even defense play, is more difficult, more important." When opponents can not be pushed up so that you may make a substantial penalty nor can you make a game, you still may be able to take a loss that will be less than their premiums.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"SCORPIO."

IF October 29 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:45 a. m. to 9:30 a. m., from noon to 3 p. m., and from 7:15 p. m. to 10:10 p. m. The danger hours are from 10 a. m. to 11:50 a. m., and from 3:20 p. m. to 6 p. m.

The astrological signs of October 29 are mildly favorable, chiefly for new undertakings. The "creative" one will seek development in new forms and good work will be accomplished, although the immediate results may not be profitable. There will be an atmosphere of uncertainty in the home, interesting experiences in connection with new friendships and a compensation of romance.

The child born on this October 29 will be a good and loyal friend, but a very bitter enemy. Its lust for revenge should be curbed, otherwise its whole life's happiness may be wrecked. It will be of a very emotional, but extremely jealous nature and often blinded to reason and fooled by appearances.

You, if born on October 29, have a naturally strong character, and act in the way you deem right, regardless of the animadversions of others. You are not swayed by the currents of gossip, but forge ahead on your course until the port is reached. You are fond of money, and the power that it brings. Too disposed to scatter your forces—and you are remarkably versatile—you should concentrate and specialize; herein lies your great opportunity.

You are domesticated and home-loving. Nothing gives you greater pleasure after the battle of the day than to seek in simple pleasures that joy and comfort which only a happy circle can give. You are fond of reading, and books on art and history attract you as they do few others.

If a woman, you are exceedingly interested, more so than the average, in clothes and possess good judgment and discrimination as to the combination of colors and artistic arrangement. You should have a home of your own in which you could indulge these tastes to your heart's content.

Your horoscope denotes an eventful and a fairly successful career, distinguished by achievement after threatened failure, by struggles won after apparent defeat, and by a never changing attitude of deep affection for those near and dear to you.

Successful people born on October 29:

Anne Case, singer (now Mrs. Mackay).
James Percy Aault, magnetician.
Thomas F. Bayard, statesman.
Hannah A. Davidson, editor, author.
Joe Evans, landscape artist.
Samuel E. Warren, educator.

Three Boys Indicted In Cab Driver Slaying

The fatal shooting of Mannie Soloman, taxicab driver, had an aftermath in District Supreme Court yesterday when three colored boys were indicted on charges of first degree murder. They are charged with having shot the cab driver when he fought back in resisting an alleged holdup.

The boys are Leonard A. Layton, William C. Robinson and Charles E. Washington. Solomon was shot and almost instantly killed at Union and O streets southwest, last August.

LEAGUE CHARGES PRESIDENT IS IGNORANT ABOUT NAVIES

ians and, excepting the executiv secretary and the assistant treasurer, serve without pay."

From that point the league swung into an attack on the policy that has followed adoption of the London Treaty. Professing to see after that agreement an understanding that the United States would be allowed to catch up to Great Britain in her construction of auxiliary ships by approximately the time that the next naval conference would be held, the league said the President's actions were leading in a different direction.

The proposal of Foreign Minister Grandi of Italy for a naval building holiday preparatory to the League of Nations' disarmament conference of 1932 was actually inspired by the Washington administration, the league hinted in these words:

Overplaying His Part.

"When Signor Grandi expressed seemingly surprised delight that his suggestion had so promptly received the support of the American administration he appeared to be overplaying his part to those who recalled not only the premature report of last summer as to President Hoover's plan for a naval holiday, but also that Secretary Stimson had been in conference with Mussolini and Grandi between that premature report and Signor Grandi's move at Geneva, and their inference as to the real authorship of the Grandi proposal was measurably confirmed when, on September 23, 1931, the State Department issued the text of a statement made that day by its representative, Mr. Hugh R. Wilson, in the League of Nations meeting at Geneva."

After pointing out embarrassment caused the United States by such a proposal coming when this country was far below the London Treaty tonnages, Wilson was quoted as saying that in view of the importance with which the general question of disarmament was regarded "we are willing to forego our treaty rights in this respect."

The league reasoned the "most obvious inference from this statement is that somewhat as President Hoover had held up the building of five of our cruisers in 1929, so he intended specifically to stop the construction at least of the seven we now have on the ways, and possibly what little more building we have in hand, excepting the only exemption specified, five destroyers about to be laid down."

However, the league observed, the Grandi proposal finally was narrowed down to one that no new keels be laid down during the year beginning November 1, 1931. This plan, it claimed, would widen the gap between the American, British, and Japanese fleets, making the ratio of the three 10, 14.7, 11.9, as against treaty proportions of 10, 10.2, 6.8.

"If President Hoover's administration," it concluded, "accepts the proposal made by the League of Nations, it does so knowing that its action specifically serves British and Japanese interests to the prejudice of analogous interests of the United States although the responsibility of the President is primarily to and for the United States."

It found in his humanitarian intentions the explanation for the President's policy.

While this statement was being distributed, agitation over the Navy's intention to close its least essential yards to reduce expenditures caused a flurry at the White House.

Navy Yard Shutdowns.

Friends of the Charleston and Boston Navy Yards said yesterday they did not believe the drastic cuts in naval appropriations for next year would close them.

Senator Smith and Representative McMillan, of South Carolina, conferred with President Hoover regarding the yard in their State, and said that while he had made no definite promise, he had agreed to consider their request that it be kept open. They said they believed it would not be closed.

Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, had an appointment at the White House also, and before he went it was said he would discuss the Boston Navy Yard with the President. As he left, he said he had not talked with Mr. Hoover regarding it, but expresseed belief later that it would not he closed.

Another Massachusetts representative, Edith Nourse Rogers, also visited the White House to discuss the Boston yard. When she left she declined to say what she had talked about, but later she said she felt there was no possibility the yard would be shut.

A belief that the Charleston Navy Yard would not be closed was expressed by Senator Smith and Representative McMillan after their conference with the President.

Both South Carolina Democrats said while Mr. Hoover had made no definite promise on their request that the yard be left open, he said he would take the matter under consideration.

"I feel absolutely confident," Senator Smith asserted, "that the navy yard is all right."

Mr. McMillan said the President seemed interested when they pointed out that the yard, giving employment to 635 men, was the only navy yard and dry dock along the more than 3,000 miles of coast from Cape Hatteras to Mexico.

Jury Unable to Agree In Collision Killing

A coroner's jury was unable to agree and was dismissed as a hung jury at the inquest held in Marlboro into the death of Ernest Smith, of Marlboro, who was killed in a collision involving his car and a truck driven by Frank Miles, of Ritchie.

This disagreement will have the effect of holding Miles for a preliminary hearing before Judge Horace Taylor. State's Attorney Alan Bowie said. Miles is now free under bond.

Boy Hurt by Auto Sues for $25,000

Grandmother of Driver Is Made Defendant as Car's Owner.

Raphel G. Ehrlich, minor, yesterday brought suit for $25,000 damages from Lillian M. Flather, 4413 Fifteenth street northwest, for injuries sustained May 15 when struck by an auto. The suit was brought in the name of Raphel's father, A. M. Ehrlich, 1309 Randolph street northwest.

Through Attorneys Elwood H. Seal and Daniel C. Eberly, the allegation is made that an automobile driven by John F. Ellis, a grandson of the defendant, struck Raphel, then 12 years old, as he was crossing the intersection of Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest.

The boy sustained a double fracture of the skull, lost most of one ear, suffered a broken right leg and crushed right foot and will suffer permanently from partial paralysis on the right side of the face, it is alleged. The suit is based on the family car doctrine that the owner of the car is responsible for damages inflicted by a person authorized to drive the machine.

Speakeasy Boosts Charge For Guests to Enjoy Raids

Chicago, Oct. 28 (U.P.).—The Continental Gold Coast Club, "$100,000 speakeasy," which police tried to close but couldn't, boosted its cover charge tonight, thanks to the amusement provided by the raiding bluecoats.

Raids every night, and sometimes twice a night have proved so enjoyable for his guests, announced Owner Ben Marden, and the resultant publicity has proved such excellent advertising, that it'll cost $10 hereafter instead of $5 for the privilege of watching officers of the law pry up floor boards looking for liquor and tear down draperies hunting for roulette wheels.

The police, having found no liquor and no roulette wheels, indicated through Capt. Gregory Moran, that they would attempt to close the "club" because it had no license as an amusement place. Replied Marden:

"The police are the best entertainers I've ever seen in any night club, but since they don't charge us a cent for their antics, I don't think an amusement license is necessary."

Strap Memory Blamed For Laxity to Children

Lincoln, Nebr., Oct. 28 (A.P.). Memories of the razor strap age made modern parents too lax with present day youth, Miss Charl Williams, field secretary of the National Education Association, told a meeting of Nebraska school teachers today. Resenting the harsher treatment accorded them in childhood, the parents of today often are overindulgent in making it easier for their offspring, she said.

"We can not discard all inhibitions. Parents and teachers have a big job finding means that will keep young people from losing all perspective and yet allow them fullest possible individual development," she said.

3 Police Are Cleared Of Manhandling Charge

Detective Sergts. Van D. Hughes and James Kenney, and Private M. J. Mahaney, of the Eighth Precinct, were cleared of charges of manhandling a prisoner by the District grand jury yesterday when that body reported an ignoramus in the case.

The grand jury had previously indicted eighteen policemen for alleged brutally treating various prisoners. The three men who were cleared were supposed to be in the vicinity when Detective Sergt. Robert J. Barrett, attached to the Detective Bureau, according to an indictment, assaulted George E. Baber, who was arrested as a suspect in the Garden T Shoppe holdup and murder, and who was quickly released.

Bullet in Home of Kin Adds to Mystery in Burnell Shooting.

Mrs. Elsie Lee Burnell, who reported to police Tuesday night that she had been shot at while standing in front of 3028 M street northwest, was held in the House of Detention last night, while her husband, Robert H. Burnell, was being detained at the Seventh Precinct for questioning.

Although Mrs. Burnell said she was standing on the street when fired at, police found a .38-caliber bullet imbedded in the floor of the kitchen at the home of W. T. Fisher, nephew of Burnell, at 1059 Jefferson street northwest, a short distance from the scene of the alleged shooting which Mrs. Burnell claims resulted in a slight flesh wound on her cheek. Fisher said he was playing cards next door at the time of the reported shooting and heard no shot, but neighbors told police they heard the report of a pistol about 10:30 p. m.

Burnell said he was attending a motion picture show when the incident took place and his wife said she was waiting for him. The couple live at McLean, Va., and were here to visit Fisher.

The Lee House Spokesman Says—

If a department store was writing our advertisements, they would say:

"OUR buyer has located a limited quantity of surprisingly good rooms at the Lee House. We advise your early shopping, for they will go quickly to discriminating buyers. All large, outside rooms. Each with bath. Offered as low as fifty dollars a month for one—slight advance for two."

A lawyer would write it this way:

"IN consideration of a reasonable sum, the Lee House, an excellent hotel, will rent, let, lease or demise large outside rooms, each with private bath, tub and shower, and each room furnished in a manner fitting to a hostelry of fine appointments.

"That the Lee House will maintain these rooms in first-class condition and do all those things that are proper and expected of a good hotel, to make the occupants thereof comfortable and happy."

An insurance man would say:

"SECURITY — PROTECTION at a low premium is yours, in occupying a room and bath at the Lee House. Don't trifle with your physical well being.

"The Lee House offers all those appointments to make and keep you happy and healthy. Sanitation throughout — rooms, dining room and kitchen.

"Make your Winter home at the Lee House. You will call it a good policy."

SURPRISING, how many ways there are of saying the same thing—that the Lee House is a good hotel and reasonably priced.

Gov. Albert Ritchie Speaks at Convention; Election Is Set Today.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 28.—With delegates representing all of the ten chapters scattered through the State, making up a group of 75 in attendance, the Maryland division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, opened their thirty-fourth annual convention here today, with Mrs. Charles O'Donnell Mackall, division president, presiding. The sessions will continue through tomorrow, when election of officers for the year will take place.

The delegates gathered for the initial meeting in the old Senate chamber at the State House where they were greeted by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie in behalf of the State. The Chief Executive, whose forbears were Virginians, spoke with pride of his Confederate ancestry. Responsive addresses were made by Mrs. Mackall and Mrs. John M. Green, of Annapolis, president of the William H. Murray Chapter, of Anne Arundel County, host chapter to the convention.

One of the features of the day was the presentation of a gavel made of wood from the historic tulip poplar tree, known as the "Liberty Tree," that stands on the front campus of St. John's College, and reputed to be 600 years old. The presentation was made by Mrs. James M. Magruder in behalf of the William H. Murray Chapter.

This afternoon the convention awarded the "Cross of Military Service" to Mrs. John M. Green, of Annapolis, who for a number of years was engaged in Red Cross activities here.

Tonight the daughters were addressed by United States Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland.

Rail Cost Hearing Opens at Norfolk

Lines and Coal Companies Called in I. C. C. Quiz of Practices.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—A large number of representatives of railroads and coal companies today attended opening session of the inquiry by the Interstate Commerce Commission into cost of fuel for rail carriers as part of a general investigation on practices of railroads affecting revenues and expenses. Examiner C. W. Berry and M. C. List, attorney for the commission, are conducting hearings which are expected to last until Saturday noon.

E. S. Moore, coal traffic manager for the Norfolk & Western Railway, gave testimony the greater part of the day, his railroad having been placed first on the list of those to be examined. The Chesapeake & Ohio, Virginian, Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac & Norfolk Southern are other lines to be investigated here, the proceedings moving to Atlanta next year.

Railroad representatives are giving testimony as to methods pursued in selection of fuel for locomotives, methods in allocating fuel orders, basis on which price paid for fuel is fixed, inspecting of fuel and practices in distributing and accounting.

State Road Cost Is $19,628,339

Virginia Highway Commission Reviews Year's Work in Richmond Meeting.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—A total of $19,628,339.28 was expended by the State highway commission during the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1931, it was announced today. In addition, the State expended $562,862.73 for the State convict road force, making a grand total for the State system of $20,191,202.01.

The year's work was reviewed by the commission at its meeting held here yesterday. The commission found the securing of rights of way at reasonable cost one of its hardest problems. The increase in such charges has recently totaled as high as $400,000 a year, it was stated. Reports to the commission indicate that the main reason for increases in rights of way costs is the depression, road commissioners being disposed to be liberal in helping needy landowners.

Of the total expended by the commission, $6,781,039.20 went for administration, operation and maintenance. For capital outlays, $13,410,162 was disbursed.

VIRGINIA REQUESTS C. M. T. C. AT SHORE

State Asks Government to Utilize Camp Pollard, Virginia Beach.

(Associated Press.)

Virginia asked yesterday that its 1,100 citizens' military training camp students be trained in future at Camp Pollard, Virginia Beach.

Brig. Gen. S. Gardner Waller, adjutant general of Virginia, proposed the beach camp in conference with officials of Third Corps area headquarters at Baltimore.

Last year Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland students took their two-weeks' training course at Fort Eutis, which the Army has ordered abandoned.

Waller informed Brig. Gen. Thomas W. Darrah, corps chief of staff, that a tremendous saving both in transportation of men and of equipment would result from use of the Tidewater camp. Sufficient tentage, bedding and cooking equipment is available at the camp to meet the requirements of the citizens' group.

Waller also pointed out the health and recreational advantages of the seaside training ground.

Darrah said a staff officer from Corps Area headquarters would be sent soon to Virginia each to survey its facilities and report to Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, corps commander. The Secretary of War selects camp sites on recommendations from generals commanding Corps Areas.

The C. M. T. C. training period, not yet set for next year, customarily is in July.

Waller, who was accompanied to Baltimore and Washington by Lieut. Col. Charles S. Caffrey, senior Regular Army instructor with the Virginia National Guard, said his proposal was in line with a program to make the Virginia Beach camp one of the greatest summer training centers in Eastern United States.

Last year in addition to units of the Virginia National Guard, a District of Columbia Engineer Regiment, the Sixth Brigade, Marine Corps Reserve, and the mechanized force of the Regular Army had training periods at Virginia Beach.

Waller said Virginia was anxious to be host to as many military units as possible.

After the visit to Baltimore, Gen. Waller and Col. Caffrey made courtesy calls on Assistant Secretary Payne, of the War Department, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, and the Militia Bureau.

Gov. Pollard's recommendation that Col. John A. Cutchin, of Richmond, be appointed chief of the Militia Bureau, was not discussed with Washington officials, Waller said. Later, he said, he might call on Secretary Hurley to urge Cutchin. The Richmond officer is chief of staff of the Twenty-ninth National Guard Division.

Waller said he believed Cutchin had "as good a chance as any one" to succeed Maj. Gen. William G. Everson to the post. Everson will retire at his own request next month.

Competition in Farmington Horse Race for Plate Keen

Mrs. Thomas H. Somerville and Mrs. John H. Whitney Stable Entries Are Favorites to Lead in Meet on Saturday.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 28.—Entries from the stables of Mrs. Thomas H. Somerville (former Marion du Pont), of Montpelier, and Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Upperville, lead all others for the annual races to be held Saturday afternoon over the Farmington Country Club course, under the auspices of the Farmington Hunt, of which Russell Mott is president.

Among the horses already entered in the first event on the day's program, the Manton Manor Plate, for 4-year-olds and upwards about 2½ miles over timber, are: The Albatross, a chestnut gelding owned by Harry Duffy, of Leesburg; Turner Wiltshire's bay gelding, Concert; O. C. Hutchinson, a brown gelding by Star Master, property of W. M. Buckley, of Fredericksburg, and the following trio from the Somerville stables: Drummer Boy, a brown gelding by Light Brigade; Racketeer, a chestnut gelding sired by Cyiden out of Break the Peace, and Content, a chestnut gelding by Natro. The winner in this event will receive the plate offered by Mrs. Thomas H. Somerville, of Montpelier.

Competition will be keen for the Farmington Plate, presented by P. H. Faulconer, of Westover, in the second race, about 2 miles over brush, for 3-year-olds and upward, to be ridden in colors. The thirteen entries include Practical Sal, a chestnut mare by Sir John Johnson, and owned by Roger Bayly, of Warrenton; Lord McGee, a bay gelding by Jeg, the property of Col. W. L. Saunders, of Sumter, S. C.; Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Loanubas, a brown gelding by Wildair; Brunette Preferred, owned by M. R. Waugh, of Culpeper; Roger Bayly's Eminence, a chestnut gelding sired by Glanmerin; J. North Fletcher's Lord Britain, a chestnut gelding by Bunting; Shylock, a brown colt sired by Meridian, and owned by Dr. J. P. Jones, of Albemarle; Jack Horner, a bay gelding from E. D. Taylor's stables at Keswick; Fleet Foot, a chestnut mare sired by Tchad, and owned by H. A. Lyne, of Orange; Alabama Bound, a bay gelding sired by Upset; Racketeer, Response and Palm Off, a quartet from the Somerville string.

The Somermille will endeavor to capture a leg on the Ortman Memorial Plate, which must be won twice by the same owner for permanent possession. The prize is the gift of Mrs. Randolph Ortman, of Blue Ridge Farm, near Greenwood. Mrs. Somerville's entries include Drummer Boy, a brown gelding sired by Light Brigade; the chestnut mare, Content, by Nantro, and the brown gelding Racketeer. Other entries in this race are in the mail.

Seven horses are entered in the final race of the afternoon, the Hunt Club Plate, donated by Hollis Rinehart, local banker, whose home is Kenridge, on the Ivy road, just west of the University of Virginia. The race is about 3 miles across country for horses that have been regularly hunted during the past season with an organized hunt; the riders to be members of a recognized hunt club.

The horses already entered are: Silver Threads, a bay gelding owned by Dr. J. P. Jones; Lewis Sutherland's chestnut gelding Lukie; Chort, a chestnut gelding owned by Grover H. Vandevender, of Ivy, huntsman for the Farmington Hunt Club; Content and Racketeer, from the Somerville stables; Turner Wiltshire's Concert and Vicaire, a brown gelding sired by Barlion, and owned by Mrs. J. P. Jones.

The races will be conducted under the sanction of the hunts committee of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association, of which Algernon S. Craven, of Greenwood, this county, is a representative. The course has been put in splendid shape, under the supervision of J. B. Belk, of the recing committee. There are eight jumps, both timber and brush.

The judges will be P. H. Faulconer, William Garth and Russell Mott, A. S. Craven, Charles A. Stone and E. D. Taylor will act as stewards and Jack Woodriff will be clerk of scales. The paddock judge will be Manley Carter, of Orange; the starter, W. B. Colthurst, and the clerk of the course, W. A. Rinehart.

METHODISTS TO GET DRY DATA SATURDAY

Church Reports to Virginia Conference Disappoint Bishop Mouzon.

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—The Virginia Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church South, decided today to hear the report of its committee on temperance Saturday morning.

Whether or not Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Southern Methodist committee on temperance, will be present to deliver his report to the conference was not announced. The fact that the arraignment of the bishop in Washington on charges brought by a Federal grand jury had been postponed at his attorney's request until Monday was taken in some quarters to indicate the possibility of his presence here Saturday.

Bishop Mouzon early this afternoon eulogized Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, who died during the church year. Others for whom memorials were spoken or read were the Rev. R. H. Potts, D. D., presiding elder of the Norfolk district; the Rev. L. T. Hitt, the Rev. C. W. Turner, the Rev. W. J. Williams, the Rev. W. P. Greene and the Rev. J. C. Harry.

Bishop Expresses Concern.

Reports were heard from Charlottesville, Petersburg, Eastern Shore and Farmville districts. Grave concern over most of the reports was expressed by Bishop Mouzon, who held up the business of the conference long enough to say that in spite of depressing economic conditions, the reports were poorer than they should have been in most instances.

The bishop also urged laymen to reconsider any plans made to lower salaries of pastors and told the ministers that the best chance they have of not having salaries cut is being returned to the present charges. "If you do not move this year," Bishop Mouzon said, "there is less probability that your laymen will take the liberty to reduce your salary. On the other hand, if you insist upon a change and get it, you stand the chance of receiving less than your predecessor."

Delegates heard Bishop Mouzon contrast the statements of the Virginia and Baltimore conferences, the latter of which reported about 75 per cent of its assessments this year.

Mission Funds Sought.

"This matter fills me with grave concern," he said, "and I am just wondering why this great conference can not come up to the Baltimore conference, which may be considered a 'border' conference. Probably because it is along the border it has organized what we might call an 'esprit de corps.'

"I know you have had hard times this year, but these reports show that most salaries have been pretty well paid, but that there has not been given so much for missions."

Bishop Mouzon suggested that ministers, rather than pay pledges to their churches for application to general expenses, should give liberally to kingdom extension work.

Bishop Mouzon took occasion to commend the report of the Rev. J. Manning oPtts of Trinity Methodist Church, Petersburg, whose pledges were pai din full.

Englishwomen Star As Private Fliers

Many Who Hold Titles Own Planes and Travel Mostly by Air.

London (U.P.).—Seven years of private flying have established the Englishwoman as a noteworthy air pilot.

Miss Amy Johnson, of Australia solo fame; Miss Winifred Spooner, winner of numerous open races; Lady Bailey, lone air tourist of Africa, and the Hon. Mrs. Victor Bruce, who flew solo to Japan, are Britain's best known women fliers.

A number of titled women, such as the Duchess of Bedford, own private airplanes and do most of their traveling throughout Great Britain and the continent by air.

Before the war a few women had proved that the task of airplane pilotage and cross-country navigation was by no means for men only. Today women are qualifying for a pilot's license, or "ticket," in rapidly increasing numbers.

Pastor Related Directly To Sixty-four Ministers

Virginia, Ill. (U.P.).—Rev. Jesse Charles Shull, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Virginia, claims the distinction of having direct relationship with 64 ministers and indirect relationship through marriage to many more.

Shull's original ancestor was Johann von Scholl, a Knight of the First Crusade, A. D. 1096. His coat of arms was worn by many noted men, and their descendants, almost without exception, have been devout, religious people.

Rev. and Mrs. Shull have three sons, whom they are grooming for the ministry.

Oklahoma Editor Sets Type, Gathers News

Holdenville, Okla. (U.P.).—Oklahoma's oldest newspaper publisher and editor, Richard Y. Blackwell, still sets the type for his paper by hand, after making his daily beat gathering news.

Blackwell, who is 81, is editor of the Enterprise a weekly in the small town of Calvin near here.

Blackwell, assisted by his wife, has published the paper since 1902. During that time he served a term as the first Mayor of Calvin and was named first chaplain of the Oklahoma Legislature.

Mayoralty Ouster Suit Deferred.

Floyd, Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Ouster proceedings against Mayor Robert E. Lee of Floyd today were continued until the January term by Judge Thurston L. Keister in Floyd Circuit Court upon motion of counsel for the plaintiff, E. E. Stusher, because of the absence of material witnesses. The plaintiff is represented by W. L. Joyce, of Stuart.

CATHOLIC SOCIETY CITES WAR CAUSES

Same Evil Exists in Europe and United States, Says Association Report.

Europe and the United States are suffering from the same evils—cultural and spiritual disunion, gross nationalism and gross capitalism—is the conclusion reached in an exhaustive report by the committee on Europe of the Catholic Association for International Peace.

The belief that there will never be any war between the United States and Europe is bolstered by two considerations—the securing through investments of American economic control in Europe uncomplicated by political sovereignty and the alliances of European and American Bankers, traders and industrialists; and secondly, the growth in means of communication, the report says.

Centers of Conflict.

Centers of conflict in Europe, the report asserts, are: the peace treaties, compulsory confession of sole war guilt by the conquered; reparations; the treatment of minorities certain of the boundary lines of the new Europe and its possessions; and the distribution of its mandated territories.

There is so much ill will between countries in Europe, the report says, that we are, by the laws of the modern western world, drawn into the orbit of international ill will.

Ill Will Flourishes.

The ill will flourishes, the report asserts, because of the doubt and uncertainty that we cast over her life and over every effort of hers to settle her problems in peace, because of our refusal to cooperate.

The report concludes that "Vatican representation in the league and Vatican conciliation and arbitration would help restore the old code disrupted centuries ago." * * * "More important is it to extend the unity of the Kingdom of Christ itself and for that unity to flower in national and international cultural, political and economic brotherhoods based upon justice and charity."

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

THE premiere Washington presentation of John Barrymore in "The Mad Genius," it seems, is really to be done in the grand, or Hollywood, manner.

Albert Howson, scenario editor for Warner Brothers Pictures, will arrive in Washington today to serve in the dual capacity of master of ceremonies and official greeter at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow night at 8:30.

As has been previously announced here, the festivities will be broadcast, and Mr. Howson, who for years was leading man with E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe in Shakespearean repertoire, will officiate at the microphone introducing official and social Washington to the radio audience as they step out of their cars at the theater. Mr. Howson also will speak from the stage.

The Fox is also more or less tilting things up on edge the same evening with their "Diplomatic Night," introducing Will Rogers to the Ambassadors Extraordinary and Ministers Plenipotentiary as "Ambassador Bill."

Speaking of the Fox, the Fox Theater-Eastern Air Transport System cotton guessing contest comes to an end tonight. All ballots, to be considered, must be deposited in the ballot box in the lobby of the theater not later than 11 o'clock tonight.

The name of the winner will be announced from the stage of the Fox next Monday night.

Of course you know what this is all about. The one guessing nearest the actual weight in pounds and ounces of a bale of cotton that has been on view in the Fox lobby will be given a free trip—with a companion of his or her own selection—by air to Atlanta, Ga., and return; with much of interest planned for the two days in the Southern metropolis.

You have already been warned that next week will be a busy one for the conscientious amusement seeker.

At the National, the Stratford-Upon-Avon Festival Company will present a distinguished week of Shakespearean repertoire, with a different play presented at every performance, unless I have both my eyes and my wires crossed.

The Belasco will experience a brilliant renaissance, after a week of darkness, with pre-Broadway presentations of S. N. Behrman's new comedy, "Brief Moment," in which Francine Larrimore is starred and Alexander Woollcott and Louis Calhern are featured members of the supporting company.

Down at the Gayety, Mr. Jimmy Lake, the Beau Brummellian Chesterfield of the sports arenas and vaudeties, will offer "Hello Jake" Fields, one of the old reliables of burlesque, as star of Columbia's "Sugar Babies."

Nor is that all. On Sunday afternoon at 3, Burton Holmes will offer the first of a series of five Sunday afternoon travel talks, this one having to do with "The Real Hollywood," what its people are like, where they work and how they play.

It might be shrewd to drop around for an earful!

Then, if you are interested in the concert stage and the like, you might care to know that on Monday afternoon, November 2, Hans Kindler will conduct the National Symphony Orchestra in its first public concert in Constitution Hall, at 4:45 o'clock.

On Thursday afternoon, also in Constitution Hall, Mrs. Katie Wilson-Greene will formally open her concert season of 1931-32 with Serge Rachmaninoff, world-famous Russian pianist, in his only local appearance of the year.

As another of Constitution Hall's attractions for this extremely full week, the Westminster Choir, under the conductorship of Dr. John Finley Williamson, will be heard in a concert program on next Wednesday evening, November 4.

On Tuesday evening, November 3, Rafael Sabatini, noted romanticist, and author of "Scaramouche," "Captain Blood," "The Sea Hawk" and other popular fiction that has been filmed with conspicuous success, will deliver a lecture on "History in Fiction" at the Central Community Center, Thirteenth and Clifton streets northwest.

But if that is an inadequate recital of the entertaiments from which you will be privileged to choose, know then that the motion-picture cathedrals for the ensuing week will hold out the following lures: Metropolitan, John Barrymore, in "The Mad Genius;" Columbia, Greta Garbo and Clark Gable, in "Susan Lenox, Her Fall and Rise;" Fox, Will Rogers, in "Ambassador Bill," and Fanchon and Marco's "Carmenesque" idea; Rialto, Mae Clarke and Ricardo Cortez, in "Reckless Living;" RKO-Keith's, Irene Dunne and Pat O'Brien, in "Consolation Marriage;" Earle, Lilyan Tashman, Joel McCrea and Kay Francis, in "Girls About Town," and James Hall, movie star, in person; Palace, Lawrence Tibbett and Lupe Velez, in "The Cuban Love Song," and Dave Schooler, in "Making Hey," revue.

Loew's Palace, by the way, next week is celebrating the thirteenth anniversary of its opening, the actual date, I believe, being November 6.

The Club Chantecler, glittering little rendezvous of society, will open its doors for the new season tomorrow night, October 30. Luxurious, small and smart, the Club Chantecler is the beau ideal of the night clubs.

Harry Albert, one of the younger of the Meyer-Davis directors, will again wield the baton over the "Chanty" Orchestra.

Off to an auspicious start, the new Club Michel, occupying the former Cafe Le Paradis premises, has in one short week taken a definite and an enviable place among the smarter gathering places of discriminating Capitalites who enjoy dancing and a floor show with their expertly prepared viands.

Miss Lael Tucker, the Theater Guild subscription secretary, is now at the National Theater to receive and allot subscriptions for the guild's third Washington season. Miss Tucker, I am informed, will be glad to answer any inquiries regarding subscriptions and the guild's proposed activities for the season.

The first guild presentation of the year, Robert Emmett Sherwood's "Reunion in Vienna," with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, will open at the National on November 9.

Yes, it does pay to advertise. You'd be surprised how many congratulatory messages I received upon the fourth observance of my twenty-fourth birthday—the insulting so-and-sos!

Farmers Burned in Blast Succumb to Their Hurts

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 28.—Both David J. Bennett and Carl G. Glaettli, Fauquier County farmers, who were badly burned by a gasoline explosion Tuesday afternoon while threshing grain near Catlett, succumbed to their injuries early this morning.

Bennett was unmarried and is survived by his mother, two sisters and two brothers. Glaettli is survived by his widow, three daughters and two sons. No arrangements have as yet been made for the funerals.

States Discuss Unemployment.

THURSDAY OCTOBER 29, 1931 SPORTS

SERIES TITLE IN BALANCE IN TECH-CENTRAL GAME

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

A exclusively predicted in this column, which also has an unsullied record for predicting that the sun will rise in the east and set in the west each day throughout 1931, Lefty Grove of the Athletics has been named the 'most valuable" player in the American League.
ble" player in the American League.

No particular sagacity attaches to the eight members of the Baseball Writers Association in their selection of Grove as the most valuable player during the past season. Was Grove the most valuable? Can a duck swim? Right. The southpaw pitcher who can win 31 games in a season while losing only four and who can guarantee a victory 880 times out of 1,000, as his percentage proves, is the most valuable player in anw man's league.

Lefty Grove was a valuable man to the Athletics even when he wasn't in the box. His presence on the bench enabled Connie Mack to tolerate the remainder of his pitchers to a greater degree than any other manager in the league was permitted. With Grove always available for relief duty, Mack was in a position to permit his starting pitchers more leeway in the matter of runs allowed than were his contemporary managers. He knew if they became threatening. Grove if they became threatening. Grove's iron arm toiled in 41 games last year.

The "most valuable" player award of the past three years is not to be confused with the official awards made by each league previous to 1929 which were accompanied with appropriate certificates and $1,000 of the coin of the realm.

The awards for the past three years have been made by a committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America composed of one representative from each city in the league. The baseball writers took up the award when both the National and American leagues discontinued the custom in 1929.

There was a reason for the action of the leagues in abandoning the awards. It seems that one of the outgrowths of the business of honoring an individual player was a demand for salary boosts by the players thus signalled out. The magnates were placed in embarrassing situations. Having gone on recor as establishing the particular player's worth, they were being asked by the players to show their good faith by raising the ante in the yearly contract. M ickey Cochrane's case, in 1929, when he became a holdout after winning the most valuable player award for 1928, is very much in point. Cochrane finally signed at an increased stipend, but the award was discontinued stratighway and forthwith.

It is noted that Joe Cronin polled eighteen voes i nthe most valuable player balloting and thus was recognized as the outstanding performer o nthe Washington team during the past campaign. But Sammy West, who was given but sixteen votes, was the most valuable Washington player in the memory of this column.

West last year demonstrated that he has completely overcome his shyness against left-handed pitching as a result of being "beaned" several years ago by a southpaw. As a matter of fact, a perusal of his batting record for 1931 reveals that his average was better against left-handed pitching than against righthanders.

But West's true value does not lie in his batting average, impressive as that may be. It is his ability to roam the outfield and cut off seemingly certain hits, that has made him most valuable to the Washington Team. West is undoubtedly the surest catch in the American League and covers more ground than any center fielder since the hey-day of Tris Speaker. Ranking next to West in ground-covering tability is "Mule" Haas, of the Athletics, a great outfielder, who would be even more brilliant if he curbed his show-off habits.

Grove Named Outstanding In League

Voted Most Valuable in 1931 Campaign by Writers.

Gehrig Rated Second, Simmons Third in Balloting.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (A. P.).—For the second time in four years a member of the former world champion Philadelphia Athletics has been adjudged the American League's most valuable player.

Robert Moses Grove, sometimes called the greatest southpaw pitcher in history, receives the distinction for 1931, just as his battery mate, Mickey Cochrane, was chosen in 1928.

The slender lefthander with the blazing fast ball is the second pitcher to be called "most valuable" in the fourteen years the awards, official and unofficial, have been made. Walter Johnson, the "Big Train" of the Washington Club, received the distinction twice, in 1913 and 1924.

Ranked First by Six Of Eight Writers.

It was just a breeze for Grove when a committee of eight members of the Baseball Writers' Association cast their ballots. The Athletic ace, who set an all-time record by winning 31 games and losing only 4 during the past season, received 78 points out of a possible 80. His closest rival was Lou Gehrig, slugging first baseman of the New York Yankees, who received 59 points. Gehrig won the award in 1927.

Al Simmons, of the Athletics, batting leader of the American League, finished third with 51 points; Earl Averill, Cleveland outfielder, was fourth with 43, and Babe Ruth, who received the award in 1923, placed fifth with 40.

The method employed in choosing the American League's most valuable man was the same as that which resulted in the selection of Frankie Frisch, captain and second baseman of the champion St. Louis Cardinals, as the outstanding player in the National League. Ten players were ranked by each of the writers, with 10 points for a first place selection. Grove was ranked first on six lists and second on the other two. Gehrig and Simmons each received one vote for first place.

Cronin and West Mentioned.

Other players who figured in the balloting, with points accorded them, were Earl Webb, Boston, 22; Joe Cronin, Washington (winner in 1930), 18; Oscar Melillo, St. Louis, 17; Sam West, Washington, 16; Mickey Cochrane, Philadelphia, 16; George Earnshaw, Philadelphia, 12; Wes Ferrell, Cleveland, 12; Fred Marberry, Washington, 11; Hal Rhyne, Boston, 10; Ben Chapman, New York, 7; Jonathan Stone, Detroit, 6; Charley Gehringer, Detroit, 4; Lou Blue, Chicago, 4; Ralph Kress, St. Louis, 3; Carl Reynolds, Chicago, 2; Walter Stewart, St. Louis, 2; Goose Goslin, St. Louis, 2; Danny MacFayden, Boston, 2; Tom Oliver, Boston, 2; Jimmy Foxx, Philadelphia, 1.

Those who received no votes, but were placed on the "honorable mention" list, were: Durham, Boston; Fonseca, Frazier, Cissell, Chicago; Morgan, Kamm, Vosmik, Luke Sewell, Cleveland; Alexander and R. Johnson, Detroit; Gomez, Combs, Joe Sewell, Dickey, New York; Walberg, Bishop, Haas, McNair, Mahaffey, Philadelphia; Crowder, Spencer, Kuhel, Myer, Washington.

Tilden Defeats Kozeluh In German Exhibition

Hamburg, Germany, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Bill Tilden, world's professional tennis champion, continued his victorious march through his European exhibition matches by defeating Karl Kozeluh, 8—6, 10—8, 1—6, 6—3 today.

Nuesslein, German professional, defeated Frank Hunter 6—3, 6—4, 3—6, 3—6, 6—3.

Tilden and Hunter took the doubles match from Kozeluh and Roman Anjuch, 3—6, 7—5, 6—2. Albert Burke defeated Nuesslein in one long set, 12-10, before play was halted for the day. The Tilden tour is scheduled to make its next appearance in Berlin October 30.

Robinson Given Check For $10,000 by Club

Brunswick, Ga., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Wilbert Robinson, who was replaced by Max Carey recently as manager of the Brooklyn Robins, said today he had received a check for $10,000 from the club directors as a token of their esteem and for his long service as manager.

He said also he has received a telegram from a New York newspaper asking if he were to become connected with the Pittsburgh Pirates. He added he has received no overtures from Barney Dreyfuss, head of the Pirates.

Robinson said he has been having "a good time" fishing near his winter home here and has no plans for leaving any time soon.

Washington Golf Team Beaten at Baltimore

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 28.—Norfolk (Va.) golfers completely outclassed the Washington and Baltimore players in the annual Civitan Club tournament at Rodgers Forge Golf Club today by amassing a total of 39½ by the Nassau system of scoring. Washington scored 15 points and Baltimore 8½.

A kickers' handicap was counted in with the team matches. This resulted in a tie between Capt. Smith, Washington, with 90—18—72, and W. A. Fingles, Baltimore, 102—30—72.

N. H. Bundy, No. 1 on the Norfolk team, turned in a card of 75 for the first time he ever covered the course. He went out in a 35 par. His 75 was low gross.

Washington was demolished by Norfolk, 20 to 1, the lone scorer for the former being Capt. Smith. Against Baltimore the Washington team scored 14 points.

Score of Washingtonians:

Gene Gott, 89—12—77; Capt. Smith, 90—18—72; Jimmy Lewis, 100—27—73; T. J. Crowell, 94—25—69; A. Coleman, 110—25—85; Evan Sholl, 106—30—76; Shelton Cameron, 110—32—78.

Duke Defense Facing Test Saturday

Wade Sends Tackling Gridmen Against Tennessee.

Alabama-Kentucky in One of South's Best Games of Week.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Duke University football supporters are wondering if the fine defensive tactics employed by Wallace Wade's team this year will be successful against Tennessee in Knoxville Saturday.

The Blue Devils have been scored upon but once, South Carolina crossing their goal for a single touchdown in the opening game. Since then Duke played Davidson to a 0-0 tie and won from Villanova, V. M. I. and Wake Forest without relinquishing a point.

Duke's offensive, built around Kid Brewer, now the South's leading scorer, has improved with each game and Wade will depend largely upon this full back for any touchdowns he expects against the Vols.

Vols Given Scare Last Week.

Coach Bob Neyland, of Tennessee, whose team now leads the Southern Conference with four victories, has reason to worry over Duke's airtight defense. The Vols received a scare last week when North Carolina held them to a 7-0 victory.

His own defense isn't bothering Neyland, for no Southern team has shown better goal-protecting ability than the Vols, who have not been scored upon in five games while they were amassing 147 points against Maryville, Clemson, Mississippi, Alabama and North Carolina.

The battle between the two great backs, McEver and Brewer, will furnish one of the sidelights of the contest. McEver, the Nation's scoring leader in 1929, led the South until last week, when Brewer ran wild against Wake Forest to push ahead of the Tennesseean.

Alabama Came Back Strong.

Alabama and Kentucky probably will offer one of the best games of the week in their Tuscaloosa engagement. Alabama came back strong last week against Sewanee, after losing to Tennessee, while Kentucky is undefeated in the Conference play, but has a 6-6 tie with Maryland on its record.

This game will be the tenth between Alabama and Kentucky since 1922.

Kentucky won the first game, and Alabama has taken the last eight, including a 19-0 win at Kentucky's Lexington home-coming party last year.

South Carolina plays the Citadel in another of the Palmetto State Fair games at Orangeburg tomorrow to open the week's football program. This game will bear heavily on the South Carolina championship. South Carolina already has beaten Clemson, 21-0, in one of the important State championship games, while the Citadel downed Clemson, 6-0.

Ohio State to Use Two Back Fields Saturday

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Two complete back fields probably will be used by Ohio State University Saturday when the Buckeyes take on Indiana at Bloomington in their third Western Conference contest.

This plan was revealed at practice today when Coach Willaman worked Cramer, Hinchman, Holcomb and Vuchinich in one squad with Oliphant, Carroll, Keef and Welever receiving equal attention from the director.

Expecting Indians to fill the air with passes, the Buckeye coaching staff today continued their work of perfecting an aerial defense.

Star Matmen On Charity Program

Steele Tackles Jones in Feature Match at Auditorium.

Tonight's Card Expected to Net $5,000 for Needy.

THE PROGRAM.

Pat O'Shocker vs. Cy Williams.
Tiger Nelson vs. Ben Ginsberg.
Rudy Dusek vs. Matros Kirilenko.
Sandor Szabo vs. Al Pierotti.
Ray Steel vs. Paul Jones.

First bout at 8:30 o'clock. Prices $1, $1.50, $2 and $3. Capacity of Washington Auditorium, 6,700.

RAY STEELE, California's gift to the wrestling world, will lead a very distingushed ton of matmen into the Washington Auditorium tonight to perform fine first-rate wrestling matches for the benefit of the District's homeless and hungry. Steele, one of the greatest names in wrestling, whose youth and extraordinary strength mark him as the coming champion, meets Paul Jones, a 200-pound, wire-muscled scissors expert.

Any of the four remaining bouts may steal the show from Steele. Listed among the other noted grapplers on the bill are Rudy Dusek, Sandor Szabo, Matros Kirilenko and Al Pierotti.

Dusek, whose sensational slugging has accounted for every man he has met on a local mat except Jim Londos, promises to be a party in one of the best matches of the season when he trades blows and holds with Matros Kirilenko. Kirilenko has been beaten here only once, and then by Dick Shikat, former champion, who threw him easily after Kirilenko dove through the ropes and all but knocked himself out in the orchestra pit at the Auditorium.

Dusek Meets Strong Man.

Dusek will be meeting a stronger man tonight, but one who is not his equal in speed, versatility and aggressiveness. The match is limited to 30 minutes.

Sandor Szabo, the Hungarian Adonis, meets a reformed big league ball player in Al Pierotti, the former Boston Brave pitcher who turned to the mat ga / several years ago and progressed enough to warrant a match with / m Londos at Madison Square Garden two months ago. Pierotti will outweigh the 200-pound Szabo by about 20 pounds.

A slight change was made in the program yesterday when Karl Pojello wired Matchmaker Joe Turner that he would be unable to appear. His proposed bout with Justo Geraldi has been supplanted by a tussle in which Pat O'Shocker, the huge Salt Lake redhead, will tangle with Cy Williams, former Florida gridman.

Ginsberg to Tackle Nelson.

Last but far from the least part of the night's merriment will be a match in which Benny Ginsberg and Tiger Nelson, the two worst wrestlers in the world, will meet to decide the championship.

Fans stormed Turner's ticket office in the Annapolis Hotel yesterday to secure tabs for the bouts. A full house tonight will mean nearly $5,000 in the coffers of the District of Columbia committee on employment, the local body whose work during the last year has done much to render the plight of the city's hapless less miserable.

Akron Schoolboy Dies of Grid Injury

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Edson A. Oberlin, 14, Garfield High School freshman, who for 25 days suffered a blood infection believed by doctors to have resulted from a minor injury received in football practice, died today. He was the son of E. A. Oberlin, president of the Firestone Park Trust & Savings Bank.

Benny Leonard Banned By Pennsylvania Body

Philadelphia, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Benny Leonard, retired undefeated lightweight boxing champion, was today refused a license to box in Pennsylvania.

The State athletic commission is dubious about Leonard's ability to stage a comeback against the present day fighters, and for that reason will not permit him to risk injury in a Pennsylvania ring.

Garber Gains Finals In Mid-South Tennis

Pinehurst, N. C., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Don Garber, Duke University student from Washington, won a place in the men's singles finals of the eleventh annual Midsouth tennis tournament here today by defeating John Strong, of Raleigh, 6—4, 6—4.

Nelson C. Hyde, of Syracuse, N. Y., advanced to the quarter-finals with a 6—2, 6—3 victory over Marcus Lynch, of Raleigh.

In the second round, men's doubles, Jack Mee, of Chicago, and Garber defeated Robert Barrett and Albert Oglesby, of Pinehurst, 6—1, 6—0.

Duquesne Drilling For Catholic Aerials

Special to The Washington Post.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 28.—Deprived of the services of head coach Elmer Layden, who is inactive due to illness, Duquesne University's football squadron today continued hard driving for Friday night's game with Catholic U. here.

Directed by Joe Bach, who has handled the team all week, the players centered their attention on attack in a scrimmage with the frosh. Fairly satisfactory results were reported.

The "Dukes" are making every effort to steel themselves for the aerial attack of Catholic. Always weak against the overhead game, they hope to be fortified for this threat when Friday night's action is launched.

Field Goal Kicking Reaches New Low Level With Only 20 Recorded Thus Far This Year

Survey Shows Only 5 Games Won by Old Custom.

Hewitt, of Columbia, Stands Out Among Drop-Kickers.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Every year the name of "football" as applied to the present intercollegiate game becomes more of a misnomer as the ancient and honorable art of drop and placement kicking fades from the gridiron picture.

The decline in importance of the field goal really traces from the introduction of the forward pass and it was given a further kick downward by the change in the rules which moved the goal posts 10 yards back of the goal line. This year it has reached a new low, statistics compiled by Parke Davis, the football sage of Easton, Pa., reveal.

Hewitt, of Columbia, Best at Art.

The finest drop-kicker in college ranks, according to the record, is Ralph Hewitt, brilliant field general of the Columbia Lions. His 53-yard drop kick in the Cornell game last year, which gave the Lions a hard-fought 10-7 victory, ranks twenty-first in the long list of goals from the field compiled since the start of the game in the United States.

His 33-yard goal from the field against Wesleyan October 10 gives him a tie for the lead on this year's list. Ollie Olson, of Northwestern, also kicked a 33-yard field goal in the Wildcats' triumph over Ohio State Saturday.

An interesting point of the list compiled by Davis is that five of the thirteen kicks he has recorded won the games, three of them for the only score. Of such were the goals kicked by Ox Blanton, of Texas, against Oklahoma; by Otis Jefferies, of Sewanee, against the University of Virginia; by Benjamin Boswell, of Texas Christian, against Louisiana State, and by William Worthing, of Creighton, against Wyoming. Bill Skillman's placement goal helped Long Island U. defeat Baltimore, 9-7.

Drop-Kicks Number Only Four.

New Record Hung Up For Czech Marathon

Kosice, Czechoslovakia, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Jose Zabala, speedy Argentine runner, who recently broke the world's record for 30 kilometers, today won the national marathon from a group of crack European runners in 2 hours 33 minutes 19 seconds. His time was only 22 seconds slower than El Quafi's winning time at the last Olympics.

Zabala, however, broke the Czechoslovakian record of 2 hours 41 minutes 55 seconds.

Last night Zabala said he looked on today's race as a warm-up for the 1932 Olympics, where he will represent Argentina, and said he expected to run the 26 miles 385 yards in around 2 hours and 35 minutes.

The best time listed in the Athletic Almanac for the marathon is 2 hours 32 minutes 35 4-5 seconds, made by Hans Kolehmainew in winning the classic race in the 1920 Olympics.

3 U. S.-Owned Horses Trail in British Chase

Newmarket, England, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—M. F. Clayton's Disarmament, an outsider in the betting, at 18 to 1, and carrying the light weight of 109 pounds, today won the Cambridgeshire Stakes at a mile and a furlong from a smart field which included three American-owned horses.

The American entries—W. M. G. Singer's Link Boy, Marshall Field's Jacopo and A. K. Macomber's Masked Jester—were unplaced in the field of 24 horses which went to the post.

Second to Disarmament was Col. E. R. Kewley's Sir Oswald, with Sir Alfred Butt's Lord Bill third. The winner was best by three lengths, with only a half length between second and third.

Capt. J. D. Cohen's 5-year-old Slipper, the favorite, and Jacopo were the high-weighted entries, the former carrying 130 and the latter 129 pounds.

Jaz Age Wins Second In Row at Hawthorne

Hawthorne Race Track, Chicago, Ill., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Jaz Age, who races in the colors of Mrs. R. Pollard, of Texas, was winner of his second consecutive start here this afternoon when he came home winner of the fourth and best race on the card.

Buddy Hanford, contract rider for Mrs. Pollard, rushed the gelding into the lead at the rise of the barrier and did a fine job of rating him to the stretch. Peggy J. moved up to challenge at this point, but the gelding had plenty left and drew away with ease in the last sixteenth to win by three lengths. Peggy J. was second and Bill Orange finished third, a nose in front of Maid of Honor, who was the heavily supported favorite. Jaz Age was given small support and paid the lucrative odds of $14.64 in the mutuels.

A good crowd was on hand to witness the afternoon's sport which was run over a track that was slow.

Traditional Brown Jug Missing at Michigan

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—The little brown jug, intrinsically worthless but filled to the brim with the traditions of 28 years of football rivalry, is missing from its show place in the University of Michigan administration building.

Fielding H. Yost, now athletic director but football coach when the old water jug became the symbol of Univerality of Minnesota-University of Michigan gridiron competition back in 1903, was first to discover the loss. That was a month ago. A secret search for the trophy has been in progress since, but news of it leaked out only today.

The campus is being ransacked, for the jug must be available when Minnesota's football squad invades Ann Arbor November 21.

Just 28 years ago one Oscar (last name lost in antiquity), a Minnesota trainer, made off with one of Michigan's water jugs after a football game at Minneapolis. When some one at Michigan asked that the jug be forwarded, Minnesota answered, "Win it back." Since then the jug has shuttled back and forth as the symbol of victory.

Michigan has held it since 1929. Its loss is attributed to the fact there was not room in the locked trophy cases for the 5-gallon jug. The theory is that the tempetation was too great for some summer school student.

Sharkey Is Ready to Sign For Bout With Dempsey

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Jack Sharkey is ready to sign a blanket contract to fight Jack Dempsey, just as soon as the former world heavyweight champion makes known his comeback plans definitely, James J. Johnston, promoter for Madison Square Garden, said today on his boxing return from a conference with Sharkey in Boston.

Johnston intimated plans for a return Sharkey-Dempsey engagement called for the bout to be held in New York, rather than Chicago, the winner to fight Max Schmeling of Germany for the world title. Sharkey in Boston, said his tentative agreement was to meet Dempsey in Chicago.

Meanwhile Sharkey is considering a proposal from Johnston to box Tommy Loughram in another return bout, at the Garden, December 11, for charity.

Lou Brouillard, who won the world welterweight title from Jack Thompson at Boston last week, will be ready to defend his crown in the New York Garden in January, Johnston added.

Sheridan Is Laid to Rest Among Army's Heroic Dead

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—A bugler, standing amid gay-tinted falling leaves, gently blew "taps" in the dusk of this evening and the corps of cadets of the United States Military Academy laid Richard Brinsley Sheridan, jr., to rest ni a hero's grave on a hillside.

With all the impressive pageantry at its command, the Nation's soldier youth turned out through a long day to do final honor to a comrade killed in combat. Tonight he sleeps under the shadows of Crow's Nest Mountain—this favorite of the corps mortally wounded on a football field of battle—with the Hudson glinting grayly in the starlight through the shedding leaves below.

He sleeps in the company of some of the most illustrious of the Army dead—Gen. George A. Custer, killed in the Sioux massacre; "Fighting Bob" Anderson, who fired the gun at Fort Sumter that started the Civil War; the brave "Molly" pitcher, Gen. Win-

School Rivals Perfect Air Attack

Emphasize Passing in Workouts for 28th Fray Tomorrow.

Winner to Have Easy Path for Remainder of Series.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

THE 1931 high school football series will be brought to a premature close tomorrow afternoon before an estimated crowd of 10,000 when Tech and Central clash in the schoolboy grid classic of the year. The series has five more games to run, six including tomorrow's, but unless Western, Eastern and Business provide startling upsets later in the season, tomorrow's winner will doubtless garner the championship.

Much like the next war, the Tech-Central game will be fought out in the air, unless both teams have been trying to throw the others' scouts off during the week of drilling. Particularly were yesterday's workouts dominated by forward passing offense and defense.

Tech, armed with Central plays, notably that school's aerial attack, worked from 3:30 o'clock until some time after dark last night in a last strenuous effort to recapture some of the old time Tech teamwork which the 1931 edition of the team has failed to display in the series.

Teams in Good Condition.

Both squads are in first rate physical shape and more than anxious to let loose in what is annually the biggest game of the high school series, and one of the biggest games of the year in this section, high school or college. Tech still looms a slight favorite. It is rated a smarter team than Central, but the Central crowd has perhaps a slight edge in the native ability of its players even if it never approaches the Tech team in unity of action.

There is little comparison between the two teams in the matter of reserve strength. Its auxiliary power meant the ball game, Tech will win as easily as they did in 1930, 18-0. Central's first team is its only first rate combination, and every replacement Coach Coggins makes tomorrow promises to see the calibre of the Blue and White team reduced.

Hardell Has Two Teams.

Tech had two teams of virtually even strength on the practice field yesterday and Hardell was undecided which he would start. Both teams worked out against a rugged little third team, known in derisive tones about Tech territory as Wondrack's weaklings. Whether the Weaklings knew their Central plays or not, both Tech teams sliced through their line with little effort to smear the pseudo Central passes and passes off laterals.

Interest in the game continued brisk in high school circles yesterday and every intimation was given that the Central Stadium would be filled to overflowing.

It will mark the twenty-eighth meeting between the rivals. The tradition began to form in 1902 and has come down the years broken only by war-time 1918. Tech has won thirteen times and Central twelve. Tie games fill out the remaining years. Tech drew abreast of its arch-antagonist in 1929, when a 12-6 victory gave the schools an even dozen victories apiece.

CHENANGO, 4-1, WINS $10,000 GOVERNOR OGLE STEEPLECHASE

Green Cheese Is Beaten by 2 Lengths

Royal Falcon, Early Leader, Lasts to Finish Third.

Inception Wins Flat Feature; Valenciennes Trails.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.
Special to The Washington Post.

LAUREL RACE TRACK, Oct. 28.—Thomas Hitchcock's Chenango won the Gov. Ogle Steeplechase by two lengths, running the 2½ miles in 4:46. Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Green Cheese, favorite, was second, five lengths in front of Stephen Sanford's Royal Falcon. Sandford's other entry, Dark Magne, was fourth. Huffy fell at the sixteenth fence. Prowler stumbled frequently, Gracie pulled up very lame.

Chenango had a hard fight to wrest victory from Green Cheese. At the fifteenth fence, he got a clear lead and began drawing away. He was ridden by G. H. Bostwick and paid $10.80. At all times the horses seriously figuring in the race were among the three leaders. The value of the stake to the winner was $9,300, with nine starting.

Royal Falcon Lasts to Take Third.

Royal Falcon led for more than a mile when Green Cheese challenged, and for some distance the order was Royal Falcon, Chenango, Green Cheese. The three were heads apart on the far turn, the last round of the field. Green Cheese was in the lead and then Chenango, for now Royal Falcon was playing third fiddle. The race was decided at the sixteenth and last fence. This was the eighth running of the Gov. Ogle.

A large crowd of steeplechase enthusiasts was present from Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia, and many from New York.

J. Pierce, who fell with Huffy, suffered a dislocated shoulder and was sent to a Baltimore hospital.

Rigan McKinney's Inception, Mack Garner up, won his first race of the meeting in the Tilghman Handicap, feature of the flat races, and had a margin of a length and a half over the Northway Stable's Plucky Play, and the Goodstone Stable's Blind Lane was third. The feature of the race was that Valenciennes, close favorite, finished last. Inception went to the front soon after the start. He paid $6.40, and ran the mile and a furlong in 1:51 2-5. The stable backed Valenciennes, but she refused to run up to previous races.

Bubola Surprises by Victory In Sixth.

Bubola won her fourth straight victory when she beat the Heathen in the sixth race, running a mile and a sixteenth in 1:45 2-5, and paying $20.80. Fervid was third. The Heathen, was favorite, and with Nertney up, set a long lead, and it appeared improbable on entering the stretch that anything could catch him, but A. Prain closed with a rush and wore the old horse down, but she herself swerved badly near the finish, enabling the Harvey Pierce horse to regain a slight lead, but it was momentarily for Bubola, daughter of Bubbling Over, was soon righted and got a nose decision.

Big America, the favorite, led all the way in the first race for maiden 2-year-old fillies. Rebuff closed fast, placing a length behind the winner. Sun Tweed showed good speed in the stretch to land the show money, passing Galloping Duchess and others The start was delayed. The winner, ridden by A. Snider, and owned by F. J. Hughes, paid $5.30. Rebuff was $8.10 a place. Twelve started. Big America at once went into a long lead.

Flag Time Closes Fast to Cop Second.

The Northway Stable's Flag Time, outfooted in the early pace, closed fast in the stretch to pass the pacemaker, Outbound, and win the second by three lengths. Mrs. John D. Hertz's Outbound held on for the place and H. D. Bonesteel's Vacillate was third. Click, the favorite, finished fourth. W. Garner had the mount on Flagtime, which paid $12.70, and ran six furlongs in 1:12. Outbound was $11.70 a place. The race was among the three finishing in the money when the field was straightened out, but Outbound led into the stretch well in front, when Willie Garner, by saving ground on BIG AMERICA, away fast and clear, went into a brief lead at once, was steadied along until entering the home stretch, saved ground to move clear nearing the final furlong pole, but had to be kept under pressure to the finish. REBUFF, well placed from the start, closed with good courage. SUN TWEED, forced to race on the outside, outfinished GALLOPING DUCHESS. Latter showed a good effort. WAYABOUT raced very green for the entire trip. CHLOEDAIR tired fast in the final drive. LINTON NELL showed a flash of early speed. CROW'S FEET began very sluggishly.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG TIME, $12.70, $6.90, $4.40; OUTBOUND, $11.70, $8.50; VACILLATE (entry), $8.40.

FLAG TIME, hurried into a contending position, swung to the outside for racing room when entering the home stretch, wore OUTBOUND down and came away steadily. OUTBOUND, stoutly urged from the beginning, shook off VACILLATE, but could not withstand the winner. VACILLATE forced a stiff pace for five furlongs and weakened. CLICK, slower than usual to break, entered contention rounding the turn and finished with good courage. CARUSO was on the outside for the entire trip. CHICSU broke slowly. She made up some ground in the first half mile. INFERNO LAD quit. FAIR JACK bolted to the outside rounding the turn.

THIRD RACE—About two and one-half miles. Purse, $10,000 added. The Governor Ogle Steeplechase Handicap. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good and fast. Won driving; place, same. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHENANGO, $10.80, $4.80, $3.30; GREEN CHEESE, $4.10, $3.30; ROYAL FALCON (S. Sanford entry), $3.30.

CHENANGO, handled in greatly improved fashion over his previous start, raced close to ROYAL FALCON from the beginning, fenced boldly at most of his fences, assumed command at the fifteenth jump and, withstanding a strong drive, was going away when GREEN CHEESE landed badly after the final fence. GREEN CHEESE entered contention rapidly after ten jumps, gained stoutly to draw on practically even terms with the winner at the final fence, but fell back when landing badly. ROYAL FALCON showed good speed while setting the pace for two miles. He weakened during the final quarter mile. DARK MAGNE was unable to reach the leaders. THRACIAN was outrun. ICICLE was never dangerous. PROWLER nearly unseated Bauman at the seventh fence and fell out of contention. GRACIE pulled up lame. HUFFY fell at the sixteenth fence.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH DEVINE, $5.00, $3.20, $2.80; FREDERICK, $4.90, $4.20; WAR PLANE, $9.40.

HIGH DEVINE, hustled hard in the opening furlong, raced MORGIL into quick submission, saved ground and outstayed FREDERICK in a stout drive. Latter, stoutly ridden from the start, hung during the final drive. WAR PLANE would not enter the stalls, was taken to the outside and showed a good test after being forced wide the entire trip. JIMMY SUTRO, away poorly, closed an immense gap. BOSCOBEL weakened when the final test came. BLUE DAMSEL was outrun. HOBNOB had a rough trip. MORGIL met with interference leaving the back stretch. TEMPUS broke down. PHANTOM LEGION was crowded back directly after the start and pulled up.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INCEPTION, $6.40, $3.40, $3.40; PLUCKY PLAY, $5.00, $4.50; BLIND LANE, $6.40.

INCEPTION, favored by smartly improved handling, was sent to the front at once, raced around the entire trip and held PLUCKY PLAY safe under stout urging. Latter, kept close up from the start, finished gamely in the final stages. BLIND LANE forced a steady pace and held on well, although finishing in the deeper footing during the stretch run. KHORASAN was unable to improve his position. VALENCIENNES was taken up at the break and raced below her best form.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:31. Winner, C. O. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUBOLA, $20.80, $6.70, $4.30; THE HEATHEN, $4.10, $3.20; FERVID, $3.50.

BUBOLA, rated in nearest pursuit of the pacemaker, reached the front with a rush when nearing the final furlong pole, bore over and impeded THE HEATHEN and just lasted long enough. THE HEATHEN raced along on his courage for seven furlongs, was shaken up when straightened into the home stretch, came again after being interfered with and would have been winner in a few more strides. FERVID was under strong pressure in the final drive to stall off FLYING MAX. Latter went evenly throughout. BUB M'FARLAND was never a factor. EAGER PLAY could never reach the leaders.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,300. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:01½. Winner, Mrs. W. H. Denham's ch. f. (4), by Ed Crump—Monopoly. Trained by W. H. Denham. Value to winner, $900; second, $250; third, $150. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:13 4-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:53 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIR DAWN, $13.80, $4.70, $3.00; JOHN MACKLER, $3.10, $2.40; DADDY NELSON, $3.20.

FAIR DAWN, sent into contention, raced under slight restraint until leaving the back stretch, reached leader when nearing the home stretch and was strongly urged after displacing JOHN MACKLER. Latter disposed of TRAUFEY when ready, saved ground, held on well after being overtaken. DADDY NELSON came with a rush in final drive.

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)
—Laurel Selections—
By J. B. SNODGRASS.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 28.—Perfect weather has been the prime cause of the Laurel meeting, now about to close, being its most successful. A larger attendance than the world series closing game, and more money bet than on the Chicago tracks from day to day, stand out in racing history, when it is considered Laurel is a village, miles from any city. The best horses in training have performed in the stakes here, and there has been a fast track for 21 consecutive days of the 24-day season here.

Featuring the card tomorrow is the Sinapuxent for 3-year-olds, and it is highly probable that the Maryland-bred filly, Tred Avon, of the Sylvester Labrot Stable, will be the winner. She has beaten Mate and other good horses in Maryland, and the distance of a mile and 70 yards will suit her. KIP VAN WINKLE is fit, after a slow preparation, and will be the contender. PROBLEMATICAL, the sensational Glen Riddle filly, which was one of the long-priced winners of the meeting here, should figure in this gallop, and at least get in the money. The others seem to be outclassed.

FIRST RACE—SUN MANOR should account for the opening purse. He was backed last out, but seemed to need that race. He has worked well since. THEATRICAL is regarded about ready for brackets and is picked for the place. BLUE ARAB will be backed and has speed.

SECOND RACE—EGAD is best here. He was cut out, or appeared to have been cut out, for a stake horse, but was run in company over his head, and just missed winning in fast company. LUCY CHINA and TUSCAN KNIGHT also are well-bred horses which seemed a year ago as far too valuable to give any forecast of falling into maiden races in the fall of this year.

THIRD RACE—RUANE should repeat his last good race. NEALON KAY was beaten by a short margin in his last start and is getting ready to win his winter rations. SUN FRIAR has won over horses as good as these, and has an almost even chance to score here.

FOURTH RACE—A high class field of 2-year-olds start in the Leonardtown purse, J. E. Widener's STAGECRAFT is in lightly, has a flight of speed near the top class, and is selected to win. TRYANDAGAIN is coupled in this entry and adds strength to it. BLACK JACKET, long priced winner here, a flashing Black Toney-Friara Carse colt of the Glen Riddle Farm, will vie with this entry for favoritism. MEXICO should get in the money with these.

SIXTH RACE—PUTTER, winner of two races recently, should make her third victory safe in the sixth race, with GUN MAN, winner last out, as the most dangerous of the contenders. ROYAL DOULTON has a long-shot chance, but on figures will do well to get third money.

SEVENTH RACE — Having been beaten three of four times as a favorite, KADIAK is dropped in the seventh race among a cheaper lot horses, and seems the probable winner, and at a good price. CHANCELLOR is in this grade of horses and should get in the picture.

MARYLAND ANNOUNCES GRUELLING 1932 GRID SCHEDULE

Navy Eleven To Be Met Nov. 12

Site to Be Named by Tars; Vanderbilt, Duke New Foes.

Old Liners Workout for V. P. I. Game Saturday.

ELEVEN games, the most of them of the type generally conceded to be "gruelling," make up the 1932 schedule for Maryland University, one more than this year and marked by the entrance of Duke and Vanderbilt into the Old Liners' grid picture. Washington College again leads the pack and the curtain is again rung down with the Terrors of Western Maryland.

Two games hinge on future developments befoer their scenes have been named. Navy will decide on the place for the Maryland-Navy game and any spot the academy picks will meet with the approval of the College Park Institution. The Midshipmen have four logical stadii to choose from—Annapolis, Baltimore, College Park adn Washington.

Vanderbilt or Navy Game Likely Here.

Whether the Vanderbilt game will be played in Washington or Baltimore depends on Navy's decision. A Maryland game to be played in Baltimore, Vanderbilt will be met either at Griffith Stadium or College Park. If, on the other hand, Navy again chooses to come to Washington as it did this year, the Maryland-Vanderbilt game will be fought out in the Municipal Stadium, Baltimore.

Duke and Maryland signed for but one game. It was understood that Wallace Wade's outfit desired Maryland's signature on a long term contract, but Maryland did not concur in the offer. In all, the schedule looms as the stiffest the Byrdmen have ever tackled, and is consonant with the notable step forward the school has taken in the realms of football this year.

Woods, Keenan Return To Practice.

The schedule was shunted in the background at Maryland yesterday when Al Woods, quarterback, and Ted Keeann, lineman, both sent to the hospital after the Kentucky game, returned to uniform and engaged in the light signal rdill which was the team's daily preparation for Saturday's game with tVrginia Poly at Blacksburg. The team leaves tomorrow night by sleeper, arriving at Poly just before noon on the day of the game. Maryland won 13-6 last year, and looms as a downright favorite.

The 1932 schedule:

September 24—Washington College, at College Park.
October 1—Virginia, at Charlottesville; 8, V. P. I., at College Park; 15, Duke at Durham; 22, St. John's, at College Park; 29, V. M. I., at Richmond.
November 5—Vanderbilt (either at Washington, College Park or Baltimore); 12, Navy (place to be selected by Naval Academy); 19, Washington & Lee, at Lexington; 24, Johns Hopkins, at Baltimore.
December 3—Western Maryland, at Baltimore.

V. P. I. Injured Return For Maryland Game

Special to The Washington Post.

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 28.—Virginia Poly veterans came trooping back today, determined despite injuries, to play against Maryland in the homecoming game here Saturday. Jim Swart was back at guard, Al Seamon, at end and Frank Howard at full back. Even Bill Grinus, big tackle, was in uniform, but it is improbable that he will be able to play.

Poly hopes for a homecoming victory over the Old Liners received a real boost with return of the veterans. Coaches Neal and Clark also were pleased with the speed and power shown by the first eleven in scrimmage against the freshmen Tuesday. "The most successful scrimmage I have had in two years," was the comment of Head Coach Orville Neal.

ON SOUTHERN GRIDIRONS

Lexington, Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—After a long scrimmage in the rain this afternoon coaches said the Washington and Lee eleven was ready for a battle in any kind of weather Saturday, when the Generals meet the William and Mary Indians in Norfolk.

The squad was drilled in both offensive and defensive plays. The freshmen took plenty of punishment in the scrimmage.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Rain interfered with Virginia's football practice today for the first time this season. The weather cut short the practice, and the squad was sent in before 5 o'clock. The session began with dummy scrimmage on the defense against Harvard plays with all the varsity squad seeing action.

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Hopes for a home-coming day victory over Maryland rose at Virginia Tech today with the return of the veterans, Swartz, guard; Seaman, end, and Howard, full back. Grinus, the big tackle, was in uniform, but it was doubtful that he would be able to play as the result of injuries received in the Kentucky game.

A group scrimmage and a spirited signal drill kept the Gobblers busy until dark today.

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—The North Carolina State College Wolfpack went through a strenuous scrimmage drill today as its last hard workout before the game with the University of North Carolina here Saturday.

The Pack looked a bit better than usual, both the first and second string teams showing better drive than yet exhibited this fall.

Durham, N. C., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—A 30-minute drill on signals constituted Duke's practice today, and after a short workout tomorrow the team will leave for Knoxville to meet Tennessee Saturday.

Lowell Mason, Duke's field general, returned to practice in uniform today, but did not take part in the running. It is doubtful if he will play Saturday.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Probability that Smoky Ferebee, sophomore quarter back "find," would start against North Carolina State Saturday was seen in his assignment to the University of North Carolina regular list in scrimmage against the freshmen today. Should Ferebee start at quarter, Stuart Chandler would be shifted back to his old full back post. The varsity ran three consecutive 80-yard marches over the frosh today.

Athens, Ga., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—A long scrimmage against a second team using Florida plays, occupied Georgia's Bulldogs today.

With the exception of Freddie Miller, a substitute, Georgia's squad is in good condition for the game with Florida in Gainesville Saturday.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Defensive tactics against Vanderbilt formations were stressed in today's Georgia Tech football workout.

Yellow Jacket coaches have scouted Vanderbilt in several games, including the Georgia contest last Saturday at Athens, and have assured Coach Bill Alexander a strong defense will be necessary to halt the Commodores.

Baltimore Poly Beats Navy Plebe Booters

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 28.—The Navy Plebes were no match for Baltimore Polytechnic Institute on the soccer pitch today, the engineers winning handily, 7 to 1.

The Baltimoreans showed a much keener knowledge of the game in all departments and held the Plebes without a tally until late in the final quarter, Cummins, substituted for Sadler, booted the ball past Denson. The Navy yearlings were unable to cope with Tech's attack in the first half, during which the visitors got six of their seven goals, but played a stronger game in the late stages. Schorr and Kadesck did all of the scoring for Tech, the former getting five goals.

ALCOVA IN WORKOUT.

Charley Deutermann's Alcova Motors team will workout tonight at 7:30 o'clock on the Arlington Fire Department Field. Sunday the team journeys to Winchester, Va., for a game with the Winchester A. C. Ed Chewing, star tackle, will be lost for the remainder of the season with a broken arm, suffered in last Sunday's game.

4 RESERVES GAIN FAVOR AT G. U.

Viskovitch, Sherman, Catalinas, Knopka, Star in Drills.

THE attention Head Coach Tom Mills and his assistants have been centering upon the obscure Georgetown University reserve grid list, began to show fruit yesterday afternoon when Viskovitch, Catalinas, Sherman and Knopka began to loom as valuable adjuncts to the crippled varsity squad which Saturday faces Boston College in Boston.

Viskovitch, a left half, performed in outstanding fashion in yesterday's stiff drill, hurling his 180-pound frame into the melee with enough skill and energy to warrant his seeing service Saturday against the school which the 1930 Hoya team defeated 20-19. Catalinas and Knopka, a brace of tackles, showed a more than average flash of form yesterday to brighten an otherwise dark afternoon and dark fortnight for Georgetown's current football hopes.

Sherman Rated as Sub Full Back.

The slim margin on which Georgetown's back field has been operating since Danieu, Gellis, Bradley, Stanley and Maczees went out with injuries was bolstered a mite yesterday when Al Sherman, one of the reserves, was rated as improved enough to second for Leroy Bordeau, full back. The quartet of King, Alenty, Donohue and Bordeau will start the game.

Coach Mills rated the team as having an equal chance to come off victor Saturday. Boston College, Mills pointed out, has taken lickings from Fordham, Villanova and Marquette in its last three times out, and is virtually in as bad shape, physically, as the local team.

Georgetown leaves at 1 o'clock today, going first to New York and then by boat to the New England metropolis.

Brandon Mint Cops Empire City Feature

Empire City Race Track, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Form players had their troubles here this afternoon. After the first three favorites had gone down to defeat, the talent made J. J. Robinson's Flying Don a 1-to-4 choice in the Hartsdale Stakes, but the son of Master Charlie was beaten quite handily by the 6-to-1 shot, Brandon Mint, carrying the silks of the Brandon Stable. Dark Secret was third and Dark Seeker fourth and last.

Brandon Mint won by a length and a half and ran the abbreviated 6 furlongs in the fast time of 1:09 2-5. The purse was worth $2,590 to the winner. Flying Don had no excuse. Richards hustled him right into the lead and the young gelding opened up two lengths' advantage over Brandon Mint, while Dark Secret and Dark Seeker also were in close attendance.

Flying Don apparently was going easily as he entered the final straightaway, but Brandon Mint, under strong handling by Jockey Jack Long, suddenly rushed to the favorite and gradually drew away through the last furlong. Flying Don was second by five lengths.

Hitting The Head Pin

THE National Pale Drys and Temple will clash Saturday at 2:30 p. m, on the Temple Alleys in the first block of a ten-game match, for a purse of $500. It will be the first big stake match of the season for the local bowlers, and has the duckpin fans keyed to a high pitch of excitement. The second block will be rolled at Lucky Strike Saturday, November 7, at 2:30 p. m.

Bill Wood, major domo of the Lucky Strike Drives, was instrumental in getting the two crack aggregations together. In Wood's opinion it is a "natural" and should produce plenty of colorful bowling.

The Pale Drys will be represented by Jack Wolstenholme, Maxie Rosenberg, Astor Clarke, Bradley Mandley, Johnny Anderson and Joe Harrison. Temple will be led by its redoubtable captain, "Reds" Megaw, supported by George Honey, Glenn Wolstenholme, "Chief" Lovett, Chester Bild, Ollie Pacini and Ed Blakely. The latter is a Baltimorean, who does his bowling in this city.

Both teams are entered in the National Capital League, and, although the Pale Drys are leading, and Temple lodged in sixth place, the two are well matched. It was decided to schedule the match in the early afternoon so as not to interfere with the regular night schedule of the alleys.

Lord Baltimore and Standard Oil won the only shut-out victories recorded in the Petroleum League at the Columbia alleys last night. The Nobles turned the tables on Tidewater Oil, and American Oil was Standard's victim. In the other matches, J. Edward Chapman won the odd game from Crew Levick, and Texaco won by the same margin from Gulf Refining. The latter team registered high game for the night with a mark of 561, and Standard captured high team set with 1,594. Morgan, of Gulf, located 153 pins for high individual game, while Westerhaven, of Standard, pushed 370 bottles off the alley for high individual set.

CAPITAL CITY ELEVENS IN 9 GAMES

Leaders to Clash in League Sunday; 7 "Naturals."

SANDLOT football fans will have to resort to the old trick of drawing straws to decide which game to witness Sunday, so well balanced is The Post's Capital City League schedule. Only two of the nine games listed fail to fall within that category commonly referred to as "naturals," but even these promise to produce their shares of thrills and good football.

Seat Pleasant will be the scene of more than an ordinary football game with the champion Mercury eleven invading for a tilt with the up and coming Dixie Pigs, the feature attraction of the unlimited division of the league. This game will be supported by the Palace-Columbia clash in the 150-pound division, which will rival the unlimited fray in the matter of color and hard playing.

Southeast Elevens To Clash.

Another all-Southeast game is listed for Silver Spring with the Seaman Gunners and Marions furnishing the fireworks. The Gunners have gained added momentum with each succeeding game and should be at the top of their form for the all-important fray with the neighboring team. Preceding this the plucky litle Meridians will throw themselves in the path of the steam-rolling Centennials in an effort to hang the first defeat of the season on the champions.

Two Brookland clubs will battle at Gonzaga Field, the unlimited crew taking on the Griffith-Blue Coals, and 150-pounders tackling the tough Northern Prep aggregation. The big boys appear to be evenly matched in every department of the game, while the Northerns hold a slight edge over their smaller foes. Both games will be hard fought and small scores should result. The only other game on the card in the 150-pound list will bring the Stantons together with the Brentwood Hawks at Mount Rainier.

The Hawks plunged back into the swim with a 19-to-0 victory over Petworth last Sunday and hope to keep the ball rolling against the Northeast club. The Stantons have not yet hit their stride, but they figure to have an even chance against their opponents.

Trojans Face Neighborhood Rivals.

The 135-pounders offer two games that promise to be for blood. The Trojans face a neighboring rival in the Northeast Motors, while the Notre Dame Preps stack up against the West End cyclone, St. Stephen's. The first-mentioned game gives promise of developing into a real neighborhood scrap, and while the Trojans boast a more powerful team on paper, the Motors eleven can be relied upon to put up a fight. The Notre Dame Team, rated the underdog at the start of the season, has improved rapidly until it now ranks with the best of them. Only last week the Irish held the highly touted Federals to a 7-to-0 score. Notwithstanding all of the merits of the Notre Damers, St. Stephen's is still the favorite to win.

W. Va. May Consider Charity Grid Game

Morgantown, W. Va., Oct. 28 (A.P.). Harry A. Stansbury, athletic director at West Virginia University, said today he believed university officials were willing to consider a post-season charity football game for the Mountaineers, but that so far the games proposed do not meet conditions the university requires. President John R. Turner has expressed disapproval of post-season contests.

Games with Marshall and Davis-Elkins Colleges have been suggested to the university. Marshall is not on the university's schedule and the relations with Davis-Elkins have been severed.

Brandywine High Wins Soccer Double-Header

Brandywine, Md., Oct. 28.—Brandywine High School eleven won Southern section honors in Prince Georges County championship soccer competition here this afternoon, defeating Baden and Surrattsville, both by 3 to 0. It was a replay of the section series which ended in a three-way.

In both games, Brandywine scored its points in the first half when John Furgang and Walter Smoot scored a goal and penalty goal, respectively.

Brandywine and Upper Marlboro and Hyattsville, the other section finalists, now will fight it out for the county crown.

Upper Marlboro girls field ball team eliminated Baden, 10 to 0, in the play-off among intersection championship teams in another contest here today. Upper Marlboro is the Central section winner and Baden garnered Southern division laurels. The Marlboro team now will engage Hyattsville, Northern section finalist, for the county crown.

Edith Buck scored four goals and France Beall the other for Marlboro in its rout of Baden.

NAVY SQUAD IN HARD DRILL

Varied and Extensive Workout Staged; Kirn Reports.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 28.—Navy gridders were put through a varied and extensive work-out this afternoon, topping off with a stiff scrimmage session and on the whole the day's program was one of the stiffest of the year. The underlying idea of the preliminary formation drills and dummy scrimmaging on particular plays was to bolster the blocking by men forming the interference for the ball carrier, and with all to see that each player carries out his allotted task, whether the play be through the line, a sweep around the end or a combination pass.

Head Coach Rip Miller is stressing blocking above all else just now, and constantly reminds his charges that it is this department of play that makes for speed, precision and power on attack.

No Recent Line-Up Changes.

No changes in the regular line-up have been noted during the last few days, although Miller is pursuing his usual course of giving all of the first and second stringers opportunity to show their stuff and thus keep them in top notch form. The mentors are awaiting the invasion of West Virgian Wesleyan on Saturday, not that they are particularly concerned as to the ultimate outcome of the game, but at the same time they are anticipating a stiff argument from the Bobcats.

In view of this, it is likely that Miller will start his regulars against the visitors, although he had previously hoped to get by by allowing the second string men to play the whole game.

Bullet Lou Kirn, back field ace, out practically all year with an injury, returned to the line-up today.

C. U. DEPARTS TODAY FOR DUQUESNE

White to Play at Center Tomorrow in Night Game.

LOADED with determination Catholic University's football representatives, 31 in all, this morning were to entrain for Pittsburgh. Accompanied by Head Coach "Dutch" Bergman, Assistant Coaches Cotton and Vik and Trainer Louis Brunelle, they were awaiting eagerly the starting signal which tomorrow night is to send them into action against Duquesne's eleven at Forbes Field.

Leaving here at 9 o'clock, those scheduled to make the trip were: Ambrose, White, Conter, Monaco, Jim Lyons, Billinger, Baraldi, Baumgardner, Gross, Tom Scally, Duscha, Stafford, Flynn, Praatz, Howe, John Lyons, Ball, Halleron, Whelan, DeMello, Sheary, Oliver, Jankowski, Bertoni, Callender, Guarnieri, Donaher, Charley McVean, Bob McVean, Lennon and Manager Scuderi.

Only One Change In Line-Up.

Prior to his team's departure, Coach Bergman announced that, with one exception, the same line-up started against North Carolina State last week again would be used. The change is found at center where Edgar White, who has been progressing rapidly of late, supplants "Whitey" Ambrose.

Charley McVean, sophomore quarter back, was seriously considered as a starting man until yesterday, when Bergman, after much deliberation, decided to make use of his regular order. The former Gonzagan undoubtedly will see much service, however, since his long-distance punting has provided one of his team's features of late.

Final preparatory work locally was rounded out with a double-barrelled session yesterday. Following a scrimmage with the freshmen in the afternoon, varsity members returned for a night gymnasium drill, fundamentals being stressed.

Showing strictly on defense the upper classmen failed to impress in their stand against the freshmen, who made use of Duquesne plays. Only periodical bursts of form were noted as the first year men shot off tackle and through center for gain after gain.

A last effort to tighten the defense is to be made by Line Coach Cotton during tonight's drill.

As a special feature to the Pittsburgh trip Catholic players Saturday are to attend the Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech in a body.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

THE FAVORITE COW.

MANY people believe that the best cow's milk for a child is that obtained from a single, or family, cow. This opinion, put another way, is that the parents should arrange to get milk for his family from a certain cow, and to give them no milk from any other source. There are so many good arguments, of one kind or another, against this plan that it has almost fallen into disuse. However, there are still a moderate number of people who follow the plan. They say that the milk from their cow agrees with their children, and other milk does not. That is an excellent reason, if it can be proved correct.

Dr. Reuben Hill, of Utah, furnishes the first scientific proof of the correctness of this rather general, one time belief. He has established that there is a natural difference in the curd of milk from different cows. Some give milk that forms a soft curd or none at all, while others give milk with a hard curd.

Just why this is so he does not know, nor does he know what is the peculiarity in the chemistry of the milk which forms a soft curd. He has also proved that soft curd milk is a better food for the young of the human species than is the hard curd article. He does not know why. This supplies proof that some cows are better foster mothers for humans than others.

The next step in his demonstration was inventing a simple method of testing milks in this particular. This he has done. The milk is curdled with rennet in the usual fashion. At the end of ten minutes the curd is cut with a prepared knife, and an apparatus measures the amount of force necessary to make the knife cut its way through. This discovery supplies the parent with a method of proving his point by showing that his family cow gives soft curd milk.

Assuming that Dr. Hill's point is proved and finally accepted, it will then be up to the milk industry to find a solution of their problem. It may be that farmers will test their cows and set aside those that produce soft curd milk, for the production of children's and invalids' milk only. Or it may be that our experiment stations may teach us how to feed a cow to make her give a soft curd milk, or perhaps how to breed foster mother cows. Conversely, they may teach us how to feed and breed cows to produce milk that is especially good for cheese.

STUTTERING.

M. E. L. writes:

1. Is stuttering or stammering a habit or sickness?

2. Can it be cured?

3. How?

REPLY.

1. It is a habit, but behind the speech habits lie certain mental and personality characteristics.

2. Yes, though cure is not easy nor is it quickly accomplished in a person who has neglected his bad habits for a long time. A 30-year-old habit can not be broken in 30 hours, or even 30 days.

3. By intelligent, persistent, patient training.

MAY BE HEART TROUBLE.

Mrs. G. H. writes: What is the cause of badly swollen hands in a woman of 70 years. Could it be caused by poor circulation in hands and arms?

REPLY.

Are the feet swollen also? If so, heart disease or kidney disease is the probable cause. If they are not, look for some obstruction in the chest. So-called poor circulation is not the cause if the hands are badly swollen.

STOCK PRICES CLOSE NEAR LOWEST LEVEL

Losses on Principal Issues Range Up to 4 Points; Turnover Larger.

New York, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—Stock market sentiment suffered another relapse today as Wall street digested the United States Steel report, the Pennsylvania dividend cut and the poor September earnings of the class I carriers.

The overwhelming victory of the British Conservatives was favorably received in banking circles, although speculative quarters seemed to feel the tariff implications were something for the United States to reckon with. For Britain herself the return to conservatism was believed to promise important results; and bankers were quick to point out that a strengthening of confidence there should have notable repercussions elsewhere.

Stocks weakened rather sharply in the morning which saw a period of active selling, knocking many rails down 2 to 6 points and many industrials 2 to about 4. When offerings evaporated the market embarked on a slow recovery and had succeeded in reducing its losses when a late sinking spell interrupted. Final prices were around the lowest.

Rails Reach New Lows.

New York Central, Pennsylvania, Illinois Central, Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line and Jersey Central, in the rails, and Bethlehem Steel, Johns-Manville and Western Union, elsewhere, reached new lows. Net losses in principal issues ranged from 1 to 4 points. Turnover increased to 1,775,186 shares, about 400,000 larger than yesterday's.

U. S. Steel was actively sold, for traders paid more attention to the third quarter results than to the dividend payment, and the stock closed about 3 points lower. American Can, American Telephone, American Tobacco "B," Case, Allied Chemical, Consolidated Gas, North American, Wrigley, Johns-Manville and Bethelhem were down 2 to 3. New York Central touched 47¾, a record low and an extreme drop of 4¾. The net loss was 3¾. Pennsylvania, before the dividend meeting, reached more than a point but firmed when a 50 cent quarterly payment, against 75 cents previously, was announced.

Baltimore & Ohio preferred dropped 5 and Central of New Jersey was down 10. Union Pacific's net loss was 4 and Atchison's 2. Norfolk & Western rallied, closing 3 points higher. Western Union, off 6, sold at the lowest in ten years.

Business executives felt that although the British election returns spelled tariff, it was a little too early to express alarm and many preferred to withhold judgment until actual schedules had been drafted; it was pointed out that England is primarily an importer of raw materials, which probably would not be seriously affected.

Electric Power Lower.

Electric power production last week made the poorest comparison with a year ago in several months. Iron Age put steel production a point higher at 29 per cent of capacity, although it saw contrary trends in the industry and said there was difficulty in determining whether a uniform upward movement would evolve out of the present situation.

Wheat futures touched new highs for the season, but encountered substantial profit-taking. Closing quotations, however, were virtually unchanged. Corn's net changes were also small. Cotton followed stock and lost 11 to 16 points net.

Sterling rallied moderately on the election news, but the advance was somewhat smaller than had been expected and the final quotation, of $3.90¼, represented a net loss of half a cent. French francs eased and then firmed, the fluctuations being small.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—In a sizzling, high-speed advance, wheat today executed the season's top quotations and then whipsawed back in a storm of profit-taking. The advance accompanied announcement that 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat had been bought for shipment to France and that the Buenos Aires market had jumped more than 4 cents a bushel because of rust menace to crops. There was also an official report that the winter wheat outlook in the western third of Kansas had fallen much below normal as a result of drought.

Wheat closed irregular, ⅛ cent off to ¾ cent up; corn, ⅛–⅜ advanced; oats unchanged to ⅛ off, and provisions varying from 2 cents setback to a rise of 12 cents.

Violent fluctuations and heaviest trading in wheat came chiefly during the final hour. Earlier the market had shown a downward trend owing to weakness of securities and because of temporary absence of confirmation of any important actual purchases of wheat for France. British election results indicative of enactment of tariff impediments to wheat exports from the United States was also a bearish influence, not offset by evidence of strained relations between Russia and Japan.

Rallies which culminated in the sudden big upward whirl of the wheat market after midday were preceded by less impetuous gains based on speculative buying under the leadership of a popular Chicago trader. This buying accompanied expressions of belief that powerful forces were now operating toward higher market levels and that wheat could profitably accumulated on all breaks. In this connection, notice was taken of reports that large amounts of United States wheat would probably yet be sold to French dealers if credit arrangements with New York bankers were successful, payments on acceptances being extended to twelve months instead of 30 to 90 days.

Corn and oats averaged higher, influenced by wheat strength and by enlarged shipping demand here for corn.

Provisions were steadied as a result of upturns both in hog values and in grains.

BOND PRICES LOWER IN IRREGULAR SALES

Federal and Foreign Issues Prove Exception to Rule by Making Gains.

New York, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—The bond market declined irregularly today and trading decreased sharply. Sales on the stock market amounted to $10,475,000, the longest aggregate turnover since September 9, when the total was $9,094,000. The total yesterday was $13,874,000.

Foreign and United States Government issues provided conspicuous exceptions to the general trend. Loans of the Federal Government were especially active in the latter half of the session and closed generally, if moderately, higher.

Gains in foreign loans ranged from fractions to 6 points, but the movement, even in this group, was not uniform. Brazilian 6½s of 1926-1957 closed 1 point higher, but the 6½s of 1927-1957 lost about as much.

Belgians Close Higher.

Belgian 6½s closed fractionally higher, but the 6s lost about 1 point. However, the price trend of foreign loans as a whole was upward. Argentine loans made some of the sharpest gains of the whole list, and German obligations were generally higher.

Railroad bonds scored many of the larger losses, following the weakness in carrier stocks. Atchison General 4s resisted selling pressure until the afternoon when they dropped to another new minimum level at 87⅝.

Chicago, Burlington & Quincy General 4s, St. Paul 5s of 1975 and of 2000, Rock Island 4s of 1934, Colorado & Southern First 4½s, Erie 5s, of 1967, and of 1975, several issues of Missouri Pacific 5s, several New York Central and Nickel Plate loans, Pennsylvania General 4½s and series D 4¼s and Southern Pacific 4½s of 1981 were among the more active and weaker carrier bonds.

Industrials Less Active.

The downturn was not so marked in public utility and industrial loans as in the rails. The industrials were less active than any other group.

Speyer & Co. announced today that $160,000 of 7 per cent bonds of the City of Leipzig of the 1906 loan have been retired through the annual sinking fund.

The National City Bank of New York announced that $43,000 principal amount of the 7 per cent bonds and $34,000 principal amount of the 6½ per cent bonds of the Saxon State Mortgage Institution have been selected for redemption at par on December 1.

60 Basketers Report At Tech Next Week

With only two regulars missing from last year's team, Tech High's basketers will swing into action next week with a squad of about 60 seeking berths. The only missing varsity men are Johns and Johnson, neither of whom played vital parts in the 1930 series.

Returning to the Tech floor are Russell, Willison, Thomas, Wheeler and others who made a fight for the last championship, which was divided between Central and Eastern.

Eastern has been out since the start of school.

CADET SHERIDAN REST AMONG ARMY HEROES

field Scott, Gen. George A. Goethals, and other heroes of both peace and war.

And to the corps of cadets that sent him off so gayly last week to do battle for Army against Yale, saw him smashed down in a knifing tackle in the final quarter, learned that his neck had been broken and then suffered with him until he died Monday night, this was little honor enough.

In the tiny Catholic chapel, where Father J. A. Langton conducted burial services at 4 p. m., his classmates, men who had elected him their president, jammed the church, kneeling stiffly, backs erect, as the priest intoned his prayers.

CHENANGO WINNER OF LAUREL FEATURE

the turn, took the lead at the eighth pole.

Audley Farm's High Divine won the fourth race for 2-year-olds by a length from J. F. Schorr's Frederick, with Glen Riddle Farm's War Plane third, beaten off. The start was one of the worst of the meeting. They were off in a tangle after a long delay. Phantom Legion was left at the post, Jimmy Sutro was lengths back of the field and T. B. Young's Tempus broke down soon after the start. Frederick was far back of the leaders at the start. High Divine got the best of the breaks. He paid $5 and was ridden energetically by Workman. The time was 1:12 2-5.

Pocketed in that confusing vortex of flying legs and pounding hoofs in the early stages, Fair Dawn, the filly owned by Mrs. W. H. Denham, pushed her taut nostrils out into the open air in the seventh race today and roared home a winner, accounting for John Mackler and Daddy Nelson in the last gruelling furlong. Fair Dawn paid off its backers handsomely on two-dollar mutuels, returning $13.80 to the lucky straight ticket holders.

A. Prain, Fair Dawn's jockey, held a restraining rein until leaving the back stretch, and came along at the finish under strong urging. Jack Mackler, beaten out by a length and a half by Fair Dawn's courageous finish, disposed of Traufey in a duel of their own which sent the Remillard mount far behind. Daddy Nelson, slow at the start, moved up well near the end to earn $3.20 for those who held him to show.

25 Years Ago Today

OCTOBER 29, 1906.

It has been reported that the message that Secretary of State Root sent to Tokyo last week regarding the exclusion of Japanese students from the San Francisco schools has had a quieting effect upon the newspaper criticism and it is believed that the incident will not further breach international good-will.

Reports from St. Petersburg, Russia, indicate that there may possibly be some bloodshed within the next week when the imperial manifesto giving the people a constitution is published.

With the firing of a blast of dynamite from Grand Peake, Nev., the Walker Lake Indian Reservation region was opened to settlers. As the region is believed to be rich in gold deposits many hundred of prospectors took part in the "rush." Special Land Agent Parks has declared that the opening may be invalid, however, due to the arrival of several prospectors in the area before the start of the rush.

Farmer United States Senator Thomas Kearns issued a debate challenge to Senator Reed Smoot concerning charges that he had purchased a seat in the Senate from Lorenso Snow.

Emperor William of Germany was reported suffering from a cold which has prevented him from visiting Prince Phillip Eulenburg at the latter's estate at Lienbenberg.

The Russian Ambassador arrived back in the city and will be joined soon at the Embassy on I street by Baroness Rosen.

BOND PRICES LOWER IN IRREGULAR SALES

Federal and Foreign Issues Prove Exception to Rule by Making Gains.

New York, Oct. 28 (A.P.).—The bond market declined irregularly today and trading decreased sharply. Sales on the stock market amounted to $10,475,000, the longest aggregate turnover since September 9, when the total was $9,094,000. The total yesterday was $13,874,000.

Foreign and United States Government issues provided conspicuous exceptions to the general trend. Loans of the Federal Government were especially active in the latter half of the session and closed generally, if moderately, higher.

Gains in foreign loans ranged from fractions to 6 points, but the movement, even in this group, was not uniform. Brazilian 6½s of 1926-1957 closed 1 point higher, but the 6½s of 1927-1957 lost about as much.

Belgians Close Higher.

Belgian 6½s closed fractionally higher, but the 6s lost about 1 point. However, the price trend of foreign loans as a whole was upward. Argentine loans made some of the sharpest gains of the whole list, and German obligations were generally higher.

Railroad bonds scored many of the larger losses, following the weakness in carrier stocks. Atchison General 4s resisted selling pressure until the afternoon when they dropped to another new minimum level at 87⅝.

Chicago, Burlington & Quincy General 4s, St. Paul 5s of 1975 and of 2000, Rock Island 4s of 1934, Colorado & Southern First 4½s, Erie 5s, of 1967, and of 1975, several issues of Missouri Pacific 5s, several New York Central and Nickel Plate loans, Pennsylvania General 4½s and series D 4½s and Southern Pacific 4½s of 1981 were among the more active and weaker carrier bonds.

Industrials Less Active.

The downturn was not so marked in public utility and industrial loans as in the rails. The industrials were less active than any other group.

Speyer & Co. announced today that $160,000 of 7 per cent bonds of the City of Leipzig of the 1926 loan have been retired through the annual sinking fund.

The National City Bank of New York announced that $43,000 principal amount of the 7 per cent bonds and $34,000 principal amount of the 6½ per cent bonds of the Saxon State Mortgage Institution have been selected for redemption at par on December 1.

Racing secretary—Joseph McLennan.

Clerk of the scales—John P. Turner.

Timer—William Jennings.

Four Stakes Offered At Meet.

Four stakes will be offered during the Bowie meeting. The $10,000 Prince Georges (Autumn) Handicap is carded for Monday, November 16. The $25,000 Southern Maryland Handicap is listed for Saturday, November 21. 60 Basketers Report At Tech Next Week

With only two regulars missing from last year's team, Tech High's basketers will swing into action next week with a squad of about 60 seeking berths. The only missing varsity men are Johns and Johnson, neither of whom played vital parts in the 1930 series.

Returning to the Tech floor are Russell, Willison, Thomas, Wheeler and others who made a fight for the last championship, which was divided between Central and Eastern.

Eastern has been out since the start of school.

CADET SHERIDAN REST AMONG ARMY HEROES

field Scott, Gen. George A. Goethals, and other heroes of both peace and war.

And to the corps of cadets that sent him off so gayly last week to do battle for Army against Yale, saw him smashed down in a knifing tackle in the final quarter, learned that his neck had been broken and then suffered with him until he died Monday night, this was little honor enough.

In the tiny Catholic chapel, where Father J. A. Langton conducted burial services at 4 p. m., his classmates, men who had elected him their president, jammed the church, kneeling stiffly, backs erect, as the priest intoned his prayers.

the turn, took the lead at the eighth pole.

Audley Farm's High Divine won the fourth race for 2-year-olds by a length from J. F. Schorr's Frederick, with Glen Riddle Farm's War Plane third, beaten off. The start was one of the worst of the meeting. They were off in a tangle after a long delay. Phantom Legion was left at the post, Jimmy Sutro was lengths back of the field and T. B. Young's Tempus broke down soon after the start. Frederick was far back of the leaders at the start. High Divine got the best of the breaks. He paid $5 and was ridden energetically by Workman. The time was 1:12 2-5.

Pocketed in that confusing vortex of flying legs and pounding hoofs in the early stages, Fair Dawn, the filly owned by Mrs. W. H. Denham, pushed her taut nostrils out into the open air in the seventh race today and roared home a winner, accounting for John Mackler and Daddy Nelson in the last gruelling furlong. Fair Dawn paid off its backers handsomely on two-dollar mutuels, returning $13.80 to the lucky straight ticket holders.

A. Prain, Fair Dawn's jockey, held a restraining rein until leaving the back stretch, and came along at the finish under strong urging. Jack Mackler, beaten out by a length and a half by Fair Dawn's courageous finish, disposed of Traufey in a duel of their own which sent the Remillard mount far behind. Daddy Nelson, slow at the start, moved up well near the end to earn $3.20 for those who held him to show.

BRENTWOOD DRILLS.

The Brentwood Hawks will drill tonight at 7:30 o'clock at Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue northwest in preparation for Sunday's game with the Stantons in the Capital City League. All players are requested to report promptly.

All members of the Federal A. C. football team are requested to attend the drill scheduled for tonight at 7 o'clock at Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue northwest. The Federals drew a bye in the 135-pound division of the Capital City League, this week, but will meet an independent foe.

DIXIES IN WORKOUT.

The Dixie Pigs will go through their paces tonight at 8 p. m. on the Seat Pleasant field in preparation for Sunday's Capital City League contest with the champion Mercury eleven. The Dixies will drill again Saturday night at the same time. All members are requested to report promptly.

Former United States Senator Thomas Kearns issued a debate challenge to Senator Reed Smoot concerning charges that he had purchased a seat in the Senate from Lorenzo Snow.

ZONE TAXI SYSTEM DEFENDED BY KEECH

People's Counsel Files Brief; Central Labor Union for Metered Higher Rates.

Two briefs, one defending the zone taxicab system and the other denouncing it, were filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission. As no further statements are expected, the commission will begin at once a study of the data accumulated during and since the hearing, Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman, said, and probably will reach a decision some time next week.

Richmond B. Keech, people's counsel, who has encouraged the flat rate cab operation from the beginning, submitted an argument for retention of the system in behalf of the public and the independent operators. He charged the several local trade bodies with maintaining an undue interest in the welfare of the street car companies, which, he declared, are encountering competition similar to that which the steam railroads are meeting in the airplanes and buses.

The Central Labor Union, which claimed to present the views of the "vast majority" of 65,000 workers, made a plea for the return of meters and the raising of rates sufficiently high to remove the taxicab as a competitor of the street car and the intercity bus.

The commission should establish a fare "that will not permit competition with other modes of transportation to the detriment of either," the brief stated.

Would Limit Working Hours.

Asking that regulations be enacted to limit the working hours of taxi drivers so that they "will not be unduly fatigued," the labor union also strongly condemned the selling of cabs to drivers "under terms that are so manifestly unfair as to permit unscrupulous concerns to exact such conditions that practically enslave chauffeurs during the time they are attempting to pay for ownership of their cabs."

Attached to the brief were affidavits from two drivers who had worked for independent cabs on a rental or sale basis. Benjamin Harris asserted he has earned between $25 and $28 a week by working nine to twelve hours, while Alexander Smith said he has made only $18 a week by working eighteen hours a day.

A petition bearing 38 signatures of "Independent Cab" drivers protested against the "unfair method and cutthroat practice of rental cab companies, who have demoralized or ruined the taxicab industry."

The Central Labor Union brief was signed by R. A. Dickson, president; Frank J. Coleman, secretary, and John B. Colpoys, representative.

Public Not Complaining, He Says.

In a seventeen-page brief Mr. Keech outlines and answers much of the testimony presented at the recent hearing by proponents of the meter system. Answering the question, "Who are the complainants against the zone cabs?" he commented: "Certainly not the public."

The old line taxicab operators, who fought the lower rates started by the zone cabs, and the street car and bus companies are the chief objectors, the people's counsel explained.

Declaring that the street car companies have no "divine rights which bar them from competition," Mr. Keech said the losses incurred by the street railways and bus company "are actually due to the fact that the rate charged by the zone cab is more commensurate with the service rendered than the rate charged by the street cars and buses."

The Merchants and Manufacturers Association, who opposed the flat-rate system at the hearing, is made up of persons "who have a direct interest in lessening the competition for their particular outfits," Mr. Keech charged. Both William F. Ham, president of the Washington Railway & Electric Co., and John H. Hanna, president of the Capital Traction Co., are representatives of the association, he said.

Charges Street Railway Interest.

The recommendations of the Board of Trade and the Washington Chamber of Commerce came from the executive committees rather than the whole organizations, the brief declared, saying several members of these groups have a direct interest in the street railways.

Asserting that the zone cab system has not had a fair chance, Mr. Keech said that its abolishment would not only deprive the public of a valuable but inexpensive means of transportation but would throw several thousand independent drivers out of work.

Either a slightly higher rate of fare or a reduction in the size of zones may be desirable, Mr. Keech contended, but uniformity should prevail in both. Cabs should be clearly marked, he added, and maps showing clearly the several zones should be carried in each cab.

Should the commission decide to reinstate the meter system, Mr. Keech concluded, the zone system ought to be retained also, thus leaving it up to the operators and drivers to select their system of operation.

William McK. Clayton yesterday called a special meeting of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Association for tomorrow night to draft a recommendation on the taxicab controversy.

Bright Blue Weather Ends In Drizzly October Day

Shortening of Daylight Period, Bringing to Close Month Unexcelled for Mildness as Killing Frost Looms, Already 8 Days Late.

"Bright blue weather," which confirmed the poets phrase describing October, ended yesterday with cloudiness and a meager drizzling rain.

The shortening of the days is bringing to a close a month which for mildness of weather has not been equaled in previous Octobers.

There have been Octobers with warmer days, with less rain, with more sunshine, as recorded at the Weather Bureau, but none which have combined all factors to result in such a balmy clemency of ideal autumn.

With three days of the month remaining, sixteen clear days have been recorded, two above the average. Somewhat of a drought condition prevails as only .72 inches of rain has fallen as compared with the average for the year of 2.84 inches.

Although the mean temperature is 61 degrees, while the normal mean is 57.4 degrees, the record mean of 1919, 63 degrees, remained unbroken. On the 6th and 8th the thermometer reached 88, only nearing the record high of 93 which occurred October 1, 1927.

With a killing frost eight days behind its average schedule, autumnal coloration of the trees has been delayed, many of them still remaining green. A killing frost is usually expected on the 20th, weather experts said.

Hotel Doorman Indicted In Capt. Norman Killing

Indicted for killing Capt. William F. Norman at entrance of the Wardman Park Hotel, charging Joseph Henry Diggs, former colored doorman with murder in the first degree was returned by the grand jury yesterday.

Diggs is accused of having shot Capt. Norman, resident of the hotel, after Norman slapped him. The doorman followed Norman to the driveway and fired several shots into his back, and then, when the captain was lying on the ground, fired more shots into his body.

University of Missouri Coeds Average 115 Lbs.

Columbia, Mo. (U.P.).—The average University of Missouri coed weighs 115 pounds, is 5 feet 3 inches tall, diets conscientiously to keep a slender form, and has a better posture than formerly.

That's the finding of Miss Moe Kelly, physical education instructor. In a statistical survey of her students she found the lightest weighed 90 pounds and the heaviest 160.

Miss Kelly attributes better posture to physical education for women in high and elementary schools.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

Elmer Twitchell on Andre Citroen.

(Andre Citroen, French automobile magnate, announces after a visit to the United States that he failed to find the depression as serious as advertised, and that he regarded it as greatly exaggerated. News Item.)

DEAR Mons. Andre Citroen:

I see by the papers that you did not find the slump up to expectations. In fact, you say that business in the United States looked pretty good and that, compared with conditions in Europe, things here are booming. You should not make any such statement as that at a time like this, Monsieur. The American public has become so convinced that there is a terrible depression that it will be very annoyed, even distressed, by any statement to the contrary.

Already the American people are muttering their disapproval. Had you delayed your departure they might have mobbed you. You evidently have no idea how it hurts a country to nurse itself into a state of deepest gloom and then have a competent business expert come along and tell them the sun is shining. Mons. Citroen, I am surprised at you. Have you no tact?

* * * *

How would you like it, monsieur, if you have spent several years convincing yourself you were very sick and then have somebody come along and show there was nothing much the matter with you? How would you like it if you had spent many months developing a morose expression, cultivating a Grade A grouch and working yourself into a high state of heebee-jeebies over a major calamity only to be told suddenly that there was no calamity? You know how it is, monsieur. After you work hard and faithfully to steep yourself in gloom, you don't relish the idea of being told there's no occasion for it.

* * * *

YOU should have realized, Mons. Citroen, that it would break the American people all up to have somebody intimate that there was no serious trouble and that they could put away their crying towels and begin registering optimis, faith and courage. It was a big mistake for you to say, after looking into American business conditions, that you found no signs of any such depression as had been advertised. It will cost you America's friendship.

What you should have realized is that the American people had been living such a soft, prosperous easy-going life for the past ten years that when a little heavy weather came along they got panicky all over... Their lips turned blue the minute it became impossible to buy a stock at $11 a share on Monday morning and sell it for $367 a share on Friday afternoon. They got the shivers the minute they saw signs of getting back to first principles and doing a little work for their money.

* * * *

For more than two years now the American people have been educating themselves to believe that the country is sunk, that business is on the rocks, that everything is going to bust, that the sun has ceased rising regularly every morning, that there will be no more blue skies and that the United States has no future outside of selling apples. They have come to like the mood. Of course they will snap out of it one of these days, but they want to snap out of it voluntarily and not be yanked out by statements like yours.

* * * *

If you want to square yourself with the American people, Mons. Citroen, take a tip from me—issue another statement at once saying that you think conditions in this country are awful, and that you don't see how the people stand them. That will set you right, as it will make them feel comfortable again in their delusions, even if you and I know the depression is all done by mirrors. Otherwise the people will be very sore at you.

Very truly yours,

ELMER TWITCHELL.
